HOOTS 2 WOMEN ENDS LIFE!

Man Opens Fire With Two Revolvers, One Woman Dying, Other Badly Wounded.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 1.—Harry Roberts, 31 years old, a West Indian, night cook at the Hotel Lenox, on Weybosset street, walked into his boarding house at No. 77 Winter street, at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, carrying two loaded 38-calibre revolvers, and immediately opened fire on the two women he found there.

Edna Edmunds, twenty-five years old, was shot in the arm and in the hip. Carrie Lloyd, thirty-seven years old, a seamstress, was shot in the abdomen.

Roberts is dead, having shot himself in the right breast just under the heart.

At the Rhode Island Hospital it is said that the Lloyd woman must die. Edna Edmunds is in a serious condition.

"He was crazed," Medical Examiner Magill says.

Roberts fired six shots in all. He blazed away with one gun and then the other until he had fired five times at the women. Then he shot himself and fell lifeless at their feet. The neighborhood was immediately in an uproar.

"Roberts had been boarding with me for about six months," the Edmunds woman says at the hospital, "and lately I have noticed that he was acting queerly. He has also been addicted to liquor." She could give no other reason for the shooting.

. R. HEARST ON RECOUNT DECISION

[The following statement in regard to the decision as to the mayoralty of New York was re-ved by cable from Mr. Hearst:]

London, July 1, 1908.

HE result is more than satisfactory to me, and I hope it will sufficiently satisfy the citizens, for whom this long and arduous struggle has been carried on. I have said from the beginning that the fight was not to make me Mayor, but to secure an honest count of votes cast by the citizens. In the face of enormous and unnecessary difficulties, that count been secured, and hereafter it will not be possible for election thieves to commit frauds in ecy and security behind the barrier of the law. Whatever election crime is committed, be it t or small, must be publicly accounted for. That has been accomplished, and it means h for the safety of the republic.

AMERICAN LEAGUE PARK, New York, July 1.—The Yankees came back after being smothered by the immortal Cy Young, and wer hungry to take the last game of the series from the Red Sox, who were out to make it three out of four before catching the train for Philadelphia.

While the local team has been playing under a handicap of a change in managership, they were due to get together before the Hub team could put the sleep wallop over again.

It was a hard blow Old Man Young administered which would put some teams out of business for several days, but the Yanks were game and got into their stride remarkably well considering their tough McGu m plainly that it was time to make hay, and he did not intend exchanging seventh place in the standing with the Yanks again, the main object in the present short trip being to get up at the head of the first division before returning to the home field.

He asserted that a final win over the Yanks would settle their bacon, and then they could decide with the Athletics the next few days which team had the right to fifth place.

Scrappy Elberfield had the great Chesbro prepare for the last battle, and the spitball king looked good to the home talent. Lefty Burchell, inspired by seeing Cy Young in his great pitching stunt, was ready to emulate him on the mound.

Manager Murray had all his pill fingers lined up to make a selection, and there was Moren, Corridon, Ritchie, Brown and Lefty Faxon, but they did not shape up any better than the bunch Kelley displayed, composed of Gus Dorner, Pat Flaherty and Lindaman, the old stagers.

RAID ON BOOKMAKERS STOPS BETTING IN HUB

ARREST OF MEEHAN AND HARTWELL PUTS A TEMPORARY QUIETUS ON GAMBLING.

Betting on horse races and baseball games was practically at a standstill in Boston to-day as the result of the raid by the Watch and Ward Society yesterday. A few bets were made, but the bookies and the betting fraternity are determined to give the Watch and Ward agents no opportunity for continuing their campaign.

Whatever betting is done hereafter will be done quietly, according to the group of bookmakers who gathered in the hotel district on Washington street to-day. Sympathy was expressed for Meehan and Hartwell, who were arrested. "We will not attempt to make a test case of their arrests," said one well-known bookmaker. "It isn't worth while. The best thing for us is to let this so-called 'campaign' die a natural death.

"The professional betters will continue to place bets and the bookies will continue to take bets. We will work quietly. There will be no sidewalk work, and there will be no more soliciting of bets at office buildings. While there has been no formal meeting or agreement, the bookies are all determined to follow this course.

"We are thankful for the arrests in a way, although we are sorry for Hartwell and Meehan. The prosecution by the Watch and Ward people or the police or whoever else is doing it will drive out the army of would-be sports who have broken into the betting game in Boston. They have been flooding the hotel district. They have been working openly in the downtown district, soliciting bets at office buildings and even on the sidewalks. The bona fide bookmakers were forced to adopt the same tactics in an endeavor to drive the counterfeiters out of business.

"You don't see any of the counterfeits around to-day. They are scared almost to death. The regulars are doing a little work, not much. Any bets that we accept hereafter will be from persons we know. No one else will know of it."

Frank J. Meehan of No. 564 Columbus avenue, was to-day held in $100 cash bail by Judge Bennett in the Municipal Criminal Court for a continued hearing next Friday.

W. Howard Hartwell, charged with being custodian of the same bet, will be tried to-morrow.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Boston, July 1.—Pretty soft, two games for the price of one, and the fans were not slow to take advantage of the double-header which was slated at the historic ball field with the Doves and the Phillies performing in the twofold attraction.

It was the final appearance of the Quakers, and the Doves were anxious to get them on the wing before bidding farewell to the Hub.

Each team had gathered in one game apiece out of the two played, and the result of the brace on the card was to give the decision for the series. Old Sol was not so strenuous in his endeavor to put the ball players on the blink with his hot rays, for which the warriors were thankful, and the fleecy clouds also helped to obscure the golden orb.

It was a long trip on a warm day for the workmen, and only the team which could stand the gaff under such conditions was eligible for the blue ribbon.

MYSTERY OVER BROKEN SKUL

To find out how John F. Carpenter of No. 924 Tremont street, Roxbury, came to have a fracture of the skull which has placed him on the "dangerous" list at Boston City Hospital is the difficult task set late to-day for the police of Station 10, at Roxbury Crossing. The injured man is forty-two years old and married.

Late last night he was taken to the door of his home by friends. Early to-day he complained of being ill and Dr. Smith was called in. It was Dr. Smith who ordered Carpenter's immediate removal to the hospital. There he was found to have a frac skull

JUDGE GRAY REFUSES TO TAKE SECOND PLACE

UPSETS DEMOCRATIC SLATE BY DETERMINED DECISION TO KEEP OUT OF FIGHT.

NEW YORK, July 1.—In response to a telegram from the Evening Journal, asking Judge George Gray whether he would accept the Democratic vice-presidential nomination, the following answer was received to-day:

"Wilmington, Del., July 1. "

"I have your telegram saying that it is stated positively that I will accept the vice-presidential nomination and asking me whether this is true.

"As I have repeatedly said I would not consent to being placed in nomination as a candidate for the presidency, I now say with equal emphasis that I will under no circumstances consent to a nomination for the vice-presidency.

(Signed) "KEORGE GRAY."

Upsets Plans.

So sanguine were the ultra-Bryan men that the Delaware Judge would be nominated that Colonel R. M. Johnson, national committeeman from Texas, who loves sport as much as Governor Hughes hates it, advises all his friends to "buy pools on Gray, for you cannot lose."

National Committeeman Norman E. Mack said:

"The ticket probably will be Bryan and Gray, unless New York agrees upon a candidate and enters the fight."

The refusal of Governor Johnson of Minnesota, under any circumstances, to consider any other than first place, and the failure of his managers to reach here in what is believed to be sufficient time to prosecute an aggressive canvass, had accentuated the Bryan movement for Gray.

"Boss" Roger C. Sullivan, who got on the ground early, and who has since had [illegible] on the reins, is now declared to [illegible]ing up a deal that if it is con[illegible]ed will be one of the hardest blows [illegible]uld be struck at William Jennings [illegible]

"[illegible]ss" Sullivan is planning to capture the chairmanship of the resolutions committee, despite the stories that Alton B. Parker may get it.

Gumming the Coaster.

When this story came out to-day it was understood to mean that "Boss" Sullivan had discovered a way of putting rosin on the skids of Bryan's "roller-coaster" so that it may buck. The suggestion of a possibility of his taking the place or even aspiring to it was met by Mr. Sullivan with an expresson of horror. He would not have it under any circumstances. He would be satisfied to be re-elected national committeeman from Illinois and live in political harmony ever after.

COUGHLIN SURE TO BE COMMITTEEMAN, STATES WILLIAMS

To-morrow at 4 o'clock the Massachusetts delegation to the Democratic National Convention at Denver leave Boston.

John B. Moran, Alderman Fred J. Finigan and Charles I. Quirk are unable to attend the convention, and their places will be supplied by alternates. William A. Davenport of Greenfield will take the place of District Attorney Moran.

George Fred Williams, guarding against any attempt that may be made upon the train to stampede the delegates away from the Williams program, will journey with the delegates instead of proceeding ahead, as has been his custom in the past.

Hold Meeting on Train.

That a meeting of the delegates to choose a national committeeman and select a member of the committee on resolutions will be held on the train en route to Denver is assured from the statement last night of Colonel John P. Sweeney, chairman of the delegation.

Colonel Sweeney announces that he will call a meeting of the delegates on the train, and a lively time is anticipated.

The Williams slate includes George Fred himself for member of the committee on resolutions; Colonel A. C. Drinkwater for membership on the committee to notify the Presidential nominee, and Dr. John W. Coughlin of Fall River for national committeeman. Daniel F. Doherty of Westfield is still a candidate for national committeeman, and his campaign is being managed by Joseph P. Lomasney and the Boston contingent among the delegates.

Williams, in the contest for national committeeman, will be forced to take issue with the leaders of his fight for supremacy in the Spring caucuses and the convention that followed in Faneuil Hall. He is determined, however, that Dr. Cougalin of Fall River and not Daniel F. Doherty of Westfield shall be the successor of Colonel William A. Gaston on the national committee.

"Coughlin," Says Williams.

"It will be Dr. Coughlin and by a decisive vote," announced Mr. Williams to-day.

The Boston Democrats, led by Lomasney, have urged Williams to drop Dr. Coughlin and allow the election of Doherty as a "harmony" offering, but Williams is firm in his determination to have Dr. Coughlin elected.

Williams derides the claim of the Johnson men that twelve of the Massachusetts delegates will vote for the Minnesotan. "Why, we have twenty-eight delegates fully pledged to Bryan," says Mr. Williams, "and we count confidently upon the whole thirty-two. There will be no occasion for an application of the unit rule. The delegation will be received by Mr. Bryan in Lincoln at his residence, "Fairview."

MOTHS SWARM TO CAMBRIDGE FROM BOSTON

John S. Donnelly of the Cambridge park department, who has charge of the work of exterminating gypsy and brown-tail moths, issued a statement to-day, in which he states the $90,000 and three years' work which that city has given to the stamping out of these pests, went for nothing because the Dorchester, Brighton and Allston districts have been neglected.

Last night Cambridge was invaded by vast swarms of brown-tail moths, which have now developed into the winged stage of their existence. Myriads of the little white moths settled on trees, bushes, houses and electric poles.

Citizens who believed that the pests had been nearly stamped out during the past three years were thrown into despair by the invasion.

"The $90,000 we have spent and the three years' hard work we have put in have gone for nothing,' said Mr. Donnelly. "The swarms came from Dorchester, Brighton and Allston.

"I notified Agent Minot of the State moth department some time ago of just what would happen if something was not done in that district. Cambridge has paid into the State moth fund $9,000 a year and has received nothing from it."

Winchester, Melrose, Malden and the Middlesex Fells, which had been carefully cleaned of moths, was invaded.

SCENT HOAX IN DEATH NOTE

NEW YORK, July 1.—Stern Brothers & Co., the jewellers of No. 33 Gold street, received to-day the sixth black hand letter since the mysterious disappearance of Meyer Newman, a diamond salesman, last week. The letter reads as follows:

"Sir: We have received word form our agents that Meyer Newman died and had to be buried at sea. He starved himself to death. We regret his loss, as we lose our $10,000 ransom. He died fifty miles away from Santiago, Cuba. B. H.'

According to experts the letter is written in a commercial hand, and not by foreigners. The police and Stern Brothers said to-day that they believe Newman is in hiding somewhere in New York.

Cooling breezes from the northwest and a low humidity came to the relief of Boston to-day. The Weather Man said to-night will be only "seasonable."

To-day started with temperatures ranging from 71 at 7 a. m. to 76 at 11 o'clock, with a promise of remaining well down throughout the day. The humidity—the real test of a hot day—stood at 56, or 14 degrees below the normal of 70. It stood at 75 yesterday, five above normal.

There is no rain in sight for the next few days, but to-day's winds will prevail to-morrow. Thursday is expected to be even cooler than to-day.

With just five per cent. more moisture in the atmosphere than normal—that is a humidity of 75 per cent.—and a temperature standing at 90, yesterday was literally a "scorcher." Thirteen prostrations and one death from yesterday's heat were reported in Greater Boston alone.

HANDCUFFED, IN BAG, TOSSED IN THE CHARLES

Frederic A. Hall, twenty-one, of No. 176½ Brookline street, Cambridge, was handcuffed at 1.37 o'clock this afternoon in the presence of seventy-five people on the lower structure of Harvard bridge. He climbed into a canvas bag and the bag was securely tied at the top. Hall had to take a crouching position. He is over six feet tall; the bag was five feet long.

Thus handcuffed and bagged young Hall was pitched into the Charles river. In precisely fifteen seconds his head appeared above the surface of the stream. He swam for several minutes. Then the bag was pulled up. It was still tied. The handcuffs, locked, were in the bottom of the bag.

"How is it done?" everybody wanted to know at once.

"Well," said young Hall, dripping water like a Newfoundland after his plunge, "that's the secret. I will say, though, that this is the first time I have ever attempted the complete act. I have gone down handcuffed before and I have gone down bagged, but this is the first time that I have been both handcuffed and bagged."

Thomas McDonough of Cambridge, introduced as Hall's manager, says the young man has been engaged to perform next week at Paragon Park.

RICH WOMAN A SUICIDE.

POLICE HUNT GIRL AS DOCTOR'S POISONER

YOUNG WOMAN BELIEVED TO BE SLAYER OF PHILADELPHIA PHYSICIAN.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The New York police, aided by Philadelphia detectives, are searching this city to-day for a young woman believed to be the poisoner of Dr. William H. Wilson, who died at his home, No. 819 North Seventh street, Philadelphia, after drinking a bottle of ale containing cyanide of potassium.

New evidence shows that it was a woman's vengeance that brought about his death. The mystery surrounding the tragedy deepened to-day when it was learned that for weeks Dr. Wilson had lived in constant fear of assassination, seldom leaving his "house of mystery," and never without a body guard.

The hunt for the young woman followed the confiscation by Coroner Jermon of Philadelphia, of a registry record of the physician's cases, which showed that his practice was largely among young women, many of them wealthy. Several of these women died after treatment by Dr. Wilson.

Resembles Koten Case.

Entries in the physician's record showed that some of his patients were extremely young women. The police believe that the woman who killed him was such a one, and that she poisoned him either because of what had happened to herself or to some close friend or relative. Already the case bears a marked resemblance to that of Sarah Koten, who killed Dr. Anspitz.

The books and papers were taken from the doctor's home on North Seventh street, and are said to clearly show the kind of practice of which Dr. Wilson made a specialty. The books go over a period of years, and the first one examined shows entries such as this:

"Maid, age twenty; treatment April—ten days—died May —."

It is believed that the occupations of the doctor's patients in cases where death resulted were purposely entered in this manner to conceal the real standing of his patients. A search of the medical society's books up to date fails to reveal any record of Dr. Wilson as a registered practicing physician.

Poison Sent From New York.

Philadelphia detectives now in New York working on the case have learned that the bottle of ale containing the cyanide of potassium was sent Wilson from this city by the murderer.

Immediately after the discovery that the physician had been murdered, detectives unearthed two important clews to the identity of the slayer. These clews led to this city, and Coroner's Detective Frank Paul came here to follow them. He declared that he expects to make an arrest in New York to-day.

Dr. Wilson lived in constant dread that he would be killed by an enemy. The police have learned that for some time he had not left his home by day or night unless accompanied by some one.

Although a man who, from a physical standpoint, could take care of himself, Dr. Wilson for the last few weeks before his death, always had a body guard about with him.

The doctor's practice among women was such that he was constantly running chances of being attacked. The police have had their eyes opened since his poisoning. They are wondering how Dr. Wilson could have practiced fourteen years and never registered with the Board of Health.

The records of the Board of Health have been searched, but no reports concerning births or deaths have been filed with the Bureau of Vital Statistics from 1900 to 1908 and Dr. Wilson. This is despite the fact that the books now in possession of the Coroner and belonging to the dead physician show that a great number of his patients died.

Letter an Important Clew.

Frank Paul, the Coroner's detective, when asked about the doctor's failure to register his name with the Board of Health, said:

"It looks as if the doctor had a good reason for not registering his name. He had a peculiar practice."

Detective Paul is working day and night on the case and leaving nothing undone to capture the slayer. He believes that the letter accompanying the poison bottle will finally be the means of identifying the suspected young woman. As yet the police have not located the place where the letter was printed, but expect to shortly.

BIG SALE AT LACE STORE

McCarthy's, at Nos. 148 and 149 Tremont street, which not only Boston but all New England knows as "the Lace Store," is advertising what the management calls the largest and most important mark-down sale in its history. The sale is now going on.

In a time of high prices it is interesting to note what so small an amount as five cents will do, for instance, in so big a place as "the Lace Store," at Tremont and West street. It will buy a yard of fine point de Paris lace edging, or a fine white embroidered collar, or a yard of fine black Venise lace edgings.

Twenty-five cents will buy the sort of gentleman's all silk initial handkerchiefs that usually sell for a dollar or for 75 cents. Or 25 cents will buy ladies' all pure linen embroidered handkerchiefs.

But the list also includes embroideries, veiling bargains and the other specialties for which "the Lace Store" is famous. The finest quality of white and ecru lace robes, with full skirts, are marked down from $25 to $12.50.

All of which may, in part, explain the throng to-day at the corner of Tremont and West streets.

Clews to Its Whereabouts and Clews to Other Hidden Gold and Treasure Revealed in This Story.

By "The Money Man."

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Walter Sinclair, a young business man from Cleveland, met Madame Alvarez, a beautiful and mysterious woman, in Boston. He found that she was trying to elude pursuers who were intent upon doing her an injury. They hired a red car and an expert chauffeur and went about the city. They found themselves pursued by three men and a woman in a green car.

The green car whizzed by and the woman in it shouted something in a tongue that Sinclair did not understand. Then Madame Alvarez took a jewelled box from a package and removed something from it.

Madame Alvarez gave Sinclair the package from which she had removed the box, and told him to keep it until she called for it. If she never did that he was to retain it all his life and have it buried with him. She said that in cash the box contained what was worth more than half of Boston. The strange woman then left Sinclair to hide the jewelled box.

Sinclair and Madame Alvarez rode to a railway station in the red automobile. As the car stopped the woman took a sealed envelope from her bosom and gave it to Sinclair. She said the contents would throw some light on the mystery in which he had become a figure. Just as the train started a woman in black and two men ran into the station, crying out: "Stop that woman—she is an escaped lunatic!"

The train sped away, and Sinclair found himself confronted by the trio of strangers. The angriest man introduced himself as Doctor Malthus, the head of a sanitorium. The others, he said, were his assistants, Dr. Bernot and Madame Ferrati. Dr. Malthus said that Madame Alvarez was suffering from an incurable mental disease. Sinclair promised to dine with him that evening. When Sinclair went to his hotel he found that the package Madame Alvarez had asked him to guard so jealously had disappeared.

That evening Dr. Malthus called Sinclair over the phone. The doctor told Sinclair that if he came to dine with him that evening he would be given some information about the lost package. Sinclair was driven in a cab through various quiet streets and finally drew up in front of a high hedge. He was admitted to the secluded house, which was in total darkness, after a few minutes' delay.

CHAPTER XII.

A MATCH crackled and in its flare Sinclair saw the bent form and wrinkled face of a very old woman. She was dressed all in black save for an old-fashioned white neckerchief at her throat. She was lighting a candle, which she grasped tremulously in her bony claw of a hand.

With the wavering light held high above her head she eyed Sinclair from head to foot. The suspicion in her gaze led him to think that visitors at this gloomy house were not frequent and perhaps not always welcome.

"I am looking for Dr. Malthus," he said, "but think I must have made a mistake in the house. Can you tell me where he lives?"

The old hag raised one hand to her ear and shook her head. Sinclair repeated his words in a shout.

"Dr. Malthus," she quavered in a voice that was not pleasant to hear, "Dr. Malthus lives here but he never receives visitors at this hour—never." And she closed the door as if this settled the matter and there was nothing further to be said.

"But he is expecting me," persisted Sinclair, not intending for one moment to be put off in this summary fashion after such a long, tedious drive and with so much perhaps depending on his interview with this man. "He telephoned me this afternoon to come here to-night. Will you please tell him that it is Mr. Sinclair?"

"Wait here and I will see," grumbled the old woman. Then, to his amazement she closed the door and he heard her turn the key and slip the bolts into place again. The house of Dr. Malthus was indeed his castle and as carefully guarded.

With growing impatience Sinclair fretted through three minutes that seemed as many hours. When the door again opened he saw Dr. Malthus in faultless evening clothes.

"My dear Mr. Sinclair," he said, with a solicitude which was convincing even if slightly overdrawn, "after dragging you out to this lonely home of mine it is indeed a shame to have you greeted so inhospitably. I receive few visitors here and my housekeeper, poor old soul, has evidently quite forgotten that I was expecting you this evening. She guards my house like a dragon and no one can cross the treshold until she is convinced that he is some one I want to see."

Excites Wonder.

Grasping his hand warmly he drew Sinclair into a meagrely furnished reception room which was lighted now by one flickering gas jet. Here he removed his hat and coat and then followed the urbane doctor down a long gloomy corridor and into a library which at once impressed him in his host's favor.

Book shelves lined three sides of the low room and a cursory glance showed that they were filled with volumes which would be the choice only of a man of education and wide reading along varied lines. There was the best of fiction and also many works on history, economics and sociology—a few of them in English, but most of them in French and German. In the big fireplace on the fourth side of the room a fire of cannel coal smouldered cheerily. On the table in one corner stood a large bust of Napoleon. Many large photographs of European scenes, comfortable leather chairs and a huge flat top desk littered with foreign correspondence and legal looking documents, completed the furnishings of what according to every indication was the den of a man of culture and refinement.

One thing alone excited Sinclair's wonder. That was the utter absence of medical works and the charts and instruments usually found in a doctor's study. Yet this man had said he was a physician, a specialist in nervous diseases and the head of an asylum for the insane.

"Dinner will be served in a moment," said the doctor. "In the meantime will you not try one of these cigarettes? They are some I have made especially for me in Egypt, and my friends are kind enough to pronounce them very good."

As Sinclair reached to take one of the proffered cigarettes his eye caught sight of something which made him start with surprise. It was a large and excellent photograph of Mme. Alvarez lying half hidden by a heap of papers on the desk. To conceal his agitation he lowered his eyes quickly and with great deliberation lighted his cigarette. When he looked up again Dr. Malthus was sitting as before, but the photograph was no longer in sight.

As Sinclair smoked he recalled a conversation he had heard as he walked through Boston Common a short time before he reached the strange house in which he was a guest. This much of it remained clearly in his memory:

"Treasure in the open—$100—not under ground—not beyond reach from ground—locate it and reach out and get it—4-11-44—4-11-44—

"Spot where city started—well marked—crevice and cracks—$20—

"Very busiest point in South Boston—still something—

"Most prominent square in Cambridge—"

What did all these queer allusions mean? Had they anything to do with the missing package?

Dinner was served immediately in a well appointed room adjoining the library. An attentive negro butler showed Sinclair to his seat at a table on which covers were laid for two. He had expected to see Dr. Bernot and the mysterious Madame Ferrati, but evidently his host was to be his only companion. He was not sorry, for he wished to ask at once concerning the packet and he preferred to be alone with Dr. Malthus when he did so.

It seemed that the doctor understood his anxiety about the packet. At any rate before Sinclair could ask a question about it he said:

Packet Safe?

"Let us dine first, and then I will tell you about the packet for which I note by to-day's papers you have spent a good deal of money in advertising. Let me assure you that it is safe and will doubtless be in your possession within a short time. There is, however, a long story connected with it and one that will be better told after we have had dinner."

Reassured by this wholly unexpected announcement Sinclair put his worries out of mind and gave himself up to the enjoyment of what was really a most excellent dinner. There were many courses, and in each there was evidence of the cunning art of a chef whose training could have been received nowhere outside of Paris.

The doctor proved a most entertaining host. He talked with fascinating brilliance on the widest variety of topics, ranging all the way from the political situation in the Far East to the days of Ibsen and the latest society scandals.

Never once did he speak of Madame Alverez or of the extraordinary scene in the station that morning, and so skilfully did he direct the conversation along other lines that Sinclair had no opportunity of asking the questions uppermost in his mind.

When the coffee and cigars were served in the library Sinclair waited expectantly for the revelations the doctor had promised. Dr. Malthus pulled reflectively at his long Havana. In his eyes there was an amused twinkle, and as Sinclair looked at him he regretted having misjudged a man so apparently a gentleman and a good friend of his.

"I was once arrested in Southern France on a charge of which I was perfectly innocent," said the doctor slowly. "It was a most disagreeable experience. I sent for you to-night so that you may avoid a similar one with the police of Boston. Within twenty-four hours a warrant will be issued for your arrest on a charge of which it may not be easy to clear yourself, although personally I have no doubt that you are innocent."

Sinclair sat speechless. Then his adventure with Madame Alvarez was to end, as he had feared—in arrest, in disgrace for himself and Marion! And the news of it came from a man who he had more than half suspected of being a criminal himself.

The Soap Does the Work.

That's the difference between P. & G. Naphtha Soap and ordinary laundry soap.

When you use ordinary laundry soap, YOU do the work.

When you use P. & G. Naphtha Soap, the work is done for you—the SOAP does it.

There's the difference.

In one case, it takes you from seven in the morning till four in the afternoon to get through the washing; and every bit of the work is hard.

In the other case, the work is done in half that time; and every bit of it is easy.

Read these simple, easy directions and compare them with your present method of washing clothes:

TO WASH WHITE CLOTHES:—Dip each piece in lukewarm water. Rub soap on the soiled parts and roll up. Pack rolls in a tub and cover with lukewarm (not hot) water. Let them soak half an hour or longer. The very soiled pieces may be soaked over night. Fill a tub half full of lukewarm (not hot) water; unroll each piece and rub soiled parts on the washboard, using fresh soap. The dirt will come out with little or no rubbing. Rinse in two warm waters and blue in a third cooler water. Excepting in cases of sickness, clothes need not be boiled. Hang them up to dry in sunshine and fresh air.

HITCHCOCK COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

Taft Settles Management of National Campaign—Vorys in Charge in West.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Though the formal announcement will not be made until July 8 at Hot Springs, Va., the management of the Republican National campaign has been settled.

Frank H. Hitchcock will be chairman of the committee, with headquarters in New York.

Arthur I. Vorys of Ohio will be in charge of the Chicago headquarters, and will pay close personal attention to the Ohio campaign.

Mr. Taft has settled the Hitchcock-Vorys contest by practically continuing the arrangement that prevailed in the campaign for nomination. That Mr. Vorys' jurisdiction will extend to the Pacific Coast was indicated to-day. A wealthy resident of Los Angeles interested himself in Mr. Taft's campaign for the nomination. Mr. Taft asked him to come to Washington. He arrived yesterday. Mr. Taft asked him to continue his work during the coming campaign and to "report to Mr. Vorys at Chicago."

21,036 CANAL WORKERS.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The total labor force actually at work on the last day of May on Isthmian canal operations was 21,036, according to the monthly report of the chairman. The departure of European laborers continued during the month.

GIRL FINDS CLEW THAT IS GOOD FOR GOLD

Dorchester Miss Now on Trail of Key to Big Prize in Treasure Hunt.

ONE WOMAN'S GOOD HINT

Women readers have begun to come to the front in the search for the $5,000 buried treasure of the AMERICAN. They are finding the clews in the story, "Hidden—Not Lost," to the gold and other treasure and are at work trying to solve the mystery of the heroine and to make the best suggestion for the ending of the story.

One of the latest successful searchers is Miss Margaret Norton, of No. 29 Hancock street, Dorchester. She followed one of the clews in yesterday's instalment of the story that led her to South Boston. She found $5 in gold.

"I have been reading the AMERICAN'S mystery story since it started," said Miss Norton. "I have been following clews, but this is the first one that I have run to earth. However, I have hopes of getting the key to that $1,000 gold box. I need just about that amount of money now."

A number of letters and personal complaints have been received at this office to the effect that clews have led to private property to which the searcher has been forbidden.

It has been stated repeatedly that no treasure has been hidden in such a way that it may not be recovered without intruding on private property and without injuring any public property.

Mrs. G. L. Grinnell of Holbrook, after a search in Boston Common for treasure, had this excellent suggestion to make:

"Anyway, there's one thing I saw that I wish you would speak of in your paper. Some parts of the Common are swarming with caterpillars and nests. Nearly every shaggy tree in the place is alive with them. Possibly I might have had better luck about finding treasure where the tea went overboard if I had left the caterpillars in place, and taken all my time to hunt, but I couldn't bear to pass them by, so I killed them as high as I could reach with a folded AMERICAN, and dug out nests with a stick.

"Such a lot of people as were lying around there doing nothing! They had better have taken up the matter and helped to protect the trees they like so well to loaf under.

"If everybody would destroy just the few they happen to see in passing, they would soon be less in evidence. You'd better hide a key in a shaggy tree, and get some of them destroyed that way."

GLIDDEN OFF FOR SKY TRIP

Charles J. Glidden, the round-the-world autoist, and now an enthusiastic balloonist, talked with Weather Forecaster Smith at the Federal Building to-day to find out what kind of winds and weather have been provided for to-night by the authorities. Mr. Glidden is going up for a flight to-night from North Adams in his balloon "Boston."

Mr. Smith told the balloonist that there will be fine, easily managed winds and upper air currents to-night and no rain, so Mr. Glidden said he would go ahead and make his flight.

"I look forward some day," said Mr. Glidden, "to seeing the Weather Bureaus in the United States securing reports during the day and night on conditions in the upper air currents above the earth and sending the reports out for the benefit of balloonists just as our usual weather forecasts are sent out."

The men are William Nickerson, George Calder, William Bushong and Patrick O'Leary, all of Gloucester.

NO MORE DANCE HALL TRIPS FOR TEACHERS

LONG BEACH, Cal., July 1.—By order of the Board of Trustees of this school district to-day, all teachers employed are required to sign an agreement that they will not attend public dances. It is announced that any teacher violating the order will be immediately discharged.

It is aimed at the beach pavilion dances and the 5-cent dance halls, where much harm has resulted in the past, and which a number of teachers got in the habit of attending.

CUNARD CO. FINED $400

Pleading guilty to the charge of not exercising due care to prevent the landing of an immigrant before he had been examined by the immigration inspector, the Cunard Steamship Company was fined $400 by Judge Dodge in the United States District Court to-day.

Early in the Spring a Norwegian immigrant, named John Larsen, arrived on the steamship Ivernia. He was suffering from tuberculosis. After a preliminary hearing he was confined in the ship's hospital. During the night he escaped and later was found in Oregon.

He was brought back to Boston, where he died two months ago at the Carney Hospital.

HOW IT FEELS TO FACE DEATH IN LEAP FOR LIFE

SENSATIONS DESCRIBED BY DARE DEVIL BABCOCK DURING LOOP THE LOOP BICYCLE ACT.

"How does it feel to stand on my head while looping the loop? Why I don't have time to know how it feels," said Oscar V. Babcock who does the sensational Jump-the-Gap act at Wonderland twice every day.

"You see it takes me only a fraction over three seconds to do the whole turn. I make it a practice to look about fifteen feet ahead all the time and going into the loop at the rate of a mile a minute, I follow the black streak in the center of the track, sit rigid, go around and out again in a quarter of the time it takes to tell it.

"Going up into the loop I lose headway. At the top I feel as though I was touching nothing. You see the force of gravity pulls down and the centrifugal force of the circular motion drives me up. My wheel barely touches the track. Then down I come, out and over, and the act is done for the time.

Greatest Park Feature.

"If that trap ever refuses to open. If either of them ever get stuck and I'm alive afterward, I'll describe some new sensations to you."

It is estimated that more than 100,000 people will see Dare-Devil Babcock loop-the-loop this week.

This death defying feat is pronounced to be the biggest park feature yet introduced in New England. It covers the boat landing on the west side of the Lagoon for a hundred and twenty-five feet, is twenty-five feet high at the loop and fifty feet in the air at the apex of the bicycle run.

Babcock drives down a track less than three feet wide, through a trap door into the loop, around it, out of another trap and over a gap twenty feet wide in a little over three seconds.

Needn't Fear Competition.

For the first time in his life he is doing all this without the aid of any safety appliances. He has shown in all countries and is making the act more difficult in every location. Babcock says he does this to stall off competition. The thousands who watch him every afternoon and evening say he can have his act all alone. They don't want it.

The Sunday American Outing Club visiting Wonderland next Monday and Tuesday will see Manning's "Darktown" free of charge. The free tickets will be for park admission, ten cents, Darktown, ten cents, and a half fare coupon to the Merry-Go-Round, five cents, or twenty-five cents in all.

The Darktown band, Fire Brigade, dancing, singing, the funny cop, the ridiculous coon clowns, are all seen in the hourly ballyho besides twice daily in parades at Wonderland.

The Alligator Catch.

Wait until the alligator catches the funny man and pulls him overboard from the levee. Notice the racket when the New Orleans blows up and they turn the water onto the fire from the Darktown band tub.

See the hundred and one things including a grand reception at the Darktown Engine House; and the great telephone scene when the "cop" rings in for help and the foreman of the Darktown Fire Brigade wants to hold the fire back until morning because they are holding a reception at the engine house and can't leave.

Joe Keefe has lived among the Darktown people for many seasons. He is the conductor of the ballyho and tells you all about the Dark Venus weighing 300 pounds over whom all "Darktown" has gone crazy; also about the old Mammy and the Southern Warblers.

Manning's Darktown is one of the head line shows of the park. It will be free to SUNDAY AMERICAN readers Monday and Tuesday. Besides the coupons are good for half fare at the Merry-Go-Round and will admit you at Wonderland's gate so you can see the parades, the clowns, the circus, and above all the wonderful Loop-the-Loop act of Dare Devil Babcock.

DYNAMITERS WRECK LEHIGH ROAD'S BRIDGE

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 1.—Two heavy charges of dynamite exploded by a time fuse under the Lehigh viaduct at Selkirk and Perry streets about 2:35 o'clock a. m. to-day blew two heavy iron girders out of place, twisted the rails above and shattered the ties for many feet.

People in the neighborhood were thrown out of bed by the force of the explosions, which came about twenty seconds apart. The dynamite had been placed on top of one of the re-enforced concrete girders between the third and fourth span.

A passenger train was flagged just in time to prevent it from running onto the bridge and dropping to the street below. While there is no definite clew to the dynamiters, there is more than a strong suspicion that they were members of a wrecking gang of bridgemen. McClintock & Marshall completed the viaduct yesterday. It will be two or three days before the Lehigh will be able to send trains across the viaduct.

Don't blow your fingers off on the Fourth. Celebrate by going to the White Mountains. The mountains beat the finest fireworks display ever set off—and they won't blow you up, either. The tickets are good to stop over at Plymouth, North Conway or points north thereof.

GRAND OPERA FOR 10 CENTS, GOING SOME?

Belgian Company of 40 Members Can Be Heard Twice Daily at Paragon.

WHOLE BARREL OF SHOWS

How many ever witnessed grand opera at a Summer park? For the first time in park history it is at All New Paragon.

It is the Florin Belgian Grand Opera Company, entire, with Mme. Frery and all the stars fresh from the Majestic Theatre, and they are giving shows twice daily in the open air.

Manager Dodge wasn't satisfied to give airship and balloon acts, the Slide for Life, Parachute Jumps and all that to park patrons without price, but has gone to the tremendous expense of engaging the entire grand opera band of forty and a full production in the centre of the park.

This will all be free to the Sunda American Outing Club visiting Parago Park next Monday and Tuesday with fre tickets clipped from the SUNDAY AMERICAN. Grand opera, balloons, parachutes, airships, Slide for Life, open air circus, parades, clowns, bally hos, the Laughing Hyena, the swans, gondolas, Copper Slide Bump-the-Bumps and all the rest. Better order the SUNDAY AMERICAN now.

There will be three free tickets to Paragon Park next Sunday, entitling holders to twenty-five cents' worth of entertainment without cost. Ten cents' worth of this entertainment will be in the coupon of admission to the park grounds, its wo derful air navigations and the grand ope Think of grand opera for ten cents.

The second coupon will be for Farrington's Variety Theatre, where they are putting on vaudeville acts that are not surpassed in the best theatres of the country. It is a big, roomy theatre, cool, with a large seating capacity and full-sized stage. This show alone is worth going to Paragon Park to see.

The third coupon, worth five cents, is for the Park Merry-Go-Round. It so delighted the little folks this week that Manager Dodge decided to repeat the offer.

The Palm Garden at Paragon is doing a record business, and the attendance at the Park to date is far above expectations. Manager Dodge believes this is due to the new park shows, and especially the quality of the free attractions, and says he proposes to keep the standard right up throughout the season.

COULD NOT CURE WEEPING ECZEMA

Disease Began over Ear and Spread till Face and Neck were Raw—Itching, Inflammation and Soreness were Terrible—Lasted Over a Year and All Treatments Failed

UNTIL CUTICURA AGAIN PROVED GREAT SUCCESS

"Eczema began over the top of my ear. It cracked and then began to spread. I had three different doctors and tried several things, but they did me no good. At last one side of my face and my neck clear up to my hair were raw. The water ran out of it so that I had to wear medicated cotton, and it was so inflamed and sore that I had to put a piece of cloth over my pillow to keep the water from it, and it would stain the cloth a sort of yellow. The eczema itched so that it seemed as though I could tear my face all to pieces. The disease began in the fall and I did everything for it until the next winter. Then I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and it was not more than three months before it was all healed up. I still use the Cuticura Resolvent Pills once in a while to cleanse the blood. I am very thankful that I tried Cuticura, and I can recommend it to any one. Miss Ann Pearsons, Northfield, Vt., Dec. 19, '07."

200 BABIES ON FLOATING HOSPITAL TRIP

Mothers Besiege Doctors to Enter Children on First Voyage of Summer.

GO TO PEMBERTON TO-DAY

About 200 sickly children and their mothers went down to Pemberton to-day for the first trip of the season of the Boston Floating Hospital. There were sixteen physicians and fifty-eight nurses aboard, besides the crew.

The boat left Battery wharf at 10:10, an hour after schedule time. Probably 100 mothers and children were left behind for lack of accommodations on the boat, but Manager G. Loring Briggs said that most of the children debarred from the trip were not actually ailing. Their mothers took them to the boat hoping to enjoy a pleasant outing.

"We take all such cases aboard," said Mr. Briggs, "when we have room, but in case there are as many sick children as can be accommodated, well ones cannot come."

As early as 8 o'clock the wharf was thronged with mothers and babes. Many of them had physicians' certificates and were taken aboard without formality. Other children were examined by the hospital staff.

There are accommodations for 110 permanent patients. They are placed in wards on the second deck, which has been equipped with apparatus so that the temperature there is kept uniformly at 69 degrees.

The Floating Hospital has been entirely renovated, and it is believed that it will give relief to more children this Summer than any previous season.

As soon as the mothers and children trooped aboard to-day, the little ones were taken in charge by nurses. They were bathed under the eyes of the mothers, who were thus given practical instructions how to care for them. Many mothers brought food with them for their children, but this had to be discarded. While on the boat only such food as the hospital provides can be eaten.

"We need contributions in the way of old linen and clean cotton rags," said Mr. Briggs. "It would be a great help if the public would provide everything in that line that we need. It would save about $2,000 a season."

The boat will start on the return trip from Pemberton at 4:30 p. m.

BIG BARGAINS FOR THE FOURTH AT GILCHRIST'S

In anticipation of the vast throngs who are expected to fill the city for the week-end celebration, the Gilchrist Company store has assumed typical Fourth of July attire. In addition to the patriotic decorations and for the benefit of the crowds who are expected to visit the store special bargains have been arranged in every department of the store. The special bargains will be held on Thursday and Friday.

The first floor of the store has been beautifully decorated. Bunting and flags have been draped from one side of the building to the other. Unique arcaes, with intricate curves and lattice work have been erected. Within the arches myriads of electric lights have been set. Looking from one end of the store toward the other the lights are seen between the lattice work intermingled with the flashes of red, white and blue, making a magnificent spectacle.

While the decorations themselves have made the store in itself sufficiently attractive, yet the management has gone another step and provided special features in every department which should be attractive to every shopper.

Above the first floor the departments have been added to and made more attractive from a standpoint of beauty, while the same policy of commercial attractions has been carried out.

JAIL AND FINE FOR OFFICIAL FOR BRIBERY

LOWELL MAN SENTENCED FOR ACCEPTING MONEY FOR APPOINTMENT.

Isaac E. Wotten, who as chairman of the Lowell Water Board charged Charles P. Lynch of Lowell $300 for a $1,000 inspectorship, was sentenced by Judge Charles U. Bell in the Middlesex County Superior Criminal Court at East Cambridge to-day to be confined in the House of Correction, to pay a fine of $500 and to be forever disqualified under the constitution from holding any public office.

The sentence was imposed under circumstances approaching the sensational. A dozen of the most influential men of Lowell came down to testify to Wotten's previous good reputation and to ask for clemency. District Attorney John J. Higgins of Somerville flayed them alive. He called their appearance on such a mission an affront to good citizenship.

Wotten is a prosperous laundryman in Lowell. He is forty-five years old. The fact that Lynch had paid him $300 for a $1,000 inspectorship created such a stir in Lowell last Winter that Wotten paid the money back, it is said, in the presence of Mayor Frederick Farnham.

Among the men who came down from Lowell to-day to say a good word for Wotten were:

Hon. John C. Burke, president of the Traders' National Bank, orator, politician and attorney.

George M. Harrigan, president of the Lowell Trust Company.

Former Mayor James B. Casey.

William B. Moffatt, Superintendent of Police.

William F. Hills, vice-president of the Traders' National.

Freeman L. Bill, wholesale grocer.

Charles Carter, druggist, vice-president of the Massachusetts Pharmaceutical Association.

Former Alderman Norwood E. Wilder.

Postmaster Albert G. Thompson.

Rev. C. E. Fisher, pastor of the First Universalist Church.

Congressman Butler Ames said a good word for Wotten on stationery of the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C.

"This case is of great importance," said District Attorney Higgins, "and strong political influence has been brought to bear in behalf of this defendant. Despite, however, his position, his influence, his wealth, and the fact that he is able to employ distinguished counsel, may it please the court, to my mind the defendant appears here in the same position that might be occupied by the ordinary man, who has none of these advantages.

"This man is accused of a cold-blooded political proceeding, with one of the meanest crimes I know about. He has enjoyed wealth and social influence in the city of Lowell, and yet he bled a little fellow for $300 for a $1,000 job.

"The good sense and the decency of this community and of Lowell ought to be in revolt here against this man and his offence."

Saying this, the District Attorney looked directly at the group of Lowellites who had come down to do something for Wotten.

George B. Swasey of Boston, counsel for Wotten, accused the District Attorney of "making a stump speech," while pretending to be "fair."

The District Attorney immediately came back with the declaration that he had offered to accept a plea of nolo and take a $10,000 fine, and said that the Wotten people had laughed at him.

Sentence of six months and $500 fine was then imposed. A stay of sentence was granted pending a hearing on Wotten's bill of exceptions, which will be heard by the Supreme Judicial Court. Wotten furnished $3,000 bail.

BAND OF 1,000 SUFFRAGETTES FIGHT POLICE

LONDON, July 1.—One thousand suffragettes attempted to-day to rescue twenty-eight of the twenty-nine of their number who were arrested during last night's unprecedented demonstration in Parliament square. The prisoners were being hauled to prison when a mob of enraged women rushed the police van just as it was leaving the courtyard.

Expecting the attack, hundreds of police were hidden inside the courtyard. They beat back the infuriated women, who fought like maniacs. In court the women were given the option of being placed under police bonds running from $20 to $250 or going to prison for from one to three months. But one woman agreed to give bond, the others preferring the martyr role.

Before the trial Mrs. Pankhurst, one of the suffragette leaders, held a conference with her lieutenants and it was decided to raid the police court in an effort to prevent the trials. They had charges drafted against the police supported by scores of affidavits showing that the police acted with unwarranted brutality in arresting the women and that scores had been injured in the rushes by the police.

TRANSIT BOARD UNDER FIRE IN SUBWAY DEAL

The inquiry by the Boston Finance Commission into the taking of land for the Washington street subway by the Rapid Transit Commission began in earnest to-day, when the investigating body had before them George E. Crocker, chairman of the Rapid Transit Commission, and B. Leighton Beale, secretary of the same body. The hearing was private.

The hearing is the result of a recent investigation by the Common Council and the report by a special sub-committee of that body that excessive prices were paid for land on Washington street, taken by the Rapid Transit Commission for subway stations.

CHARGE HUB DEALERS SWINDLED FARMERS

SHEA AND CAMPBELL ON TRIAL FOR ALLEGED FRAUDULENT HORSE TRADES.

Several farmers from Maine and Vermont, who bought horses through glowing advertisements, and who now claim they were "buncoed," related their experiences to United States Commissioner Hayes to-day when called as witnesses at the trial of Cornelius P. Shea, former president of the International Teamsters' Union, and Joseph H. Campbell, proprietor of the Bunker Hill stables, Charlestown, who are jointly charged with using the mail in a scheme to defraud by means of a horse trade.

Although four of the complainants were called upon to-day, none of them offered any evidence which connected Mr. Shea with the case. Postoffice Inspector McLeod was the last to be called, but the case was adjourned before he gave testimony, as Attorney Sullivan, counsel for the defendant, had another case in court.

Geo. A. Smiley of Montpelier, Vt., a real estate agent, was the first witness. He said that in answer to an advertisement offering "Kitty Mack, a fast brush horse, young, and pretty as a picture," he sent $65 to Campbell.

"When the horse arrived," testified Smiley, "he had the heaves, and after I drove him twenty yards he fell down. He was crippled, had ring bones, and I should judge he was between twenty and thirty years of age. I tried to get my money back, as the horse was not what was advertised. I offered to settle for $85, but never got a cent."

George W. Mitchell of Kennebunkport, Me., the next witness, said that when a horse which was sent to him arrived, he refused to accept it from the railroad. He stated that he heard that the railroad shot the animal. Mitchell testified that he had sent Campbell $35 by mail in answer to an advertisement which described "a gray mare, eight years old, with foal, sound and a good worker." He never got his money back, although he made a demand upon Campbell and the railroad.

Andrew Christie of Ellsworth, Me., testified that he sent Campbell $40 for a horse advertised as "a fine work horse, good flesh, handsome and kind—trifle sore. Formerly in the fire department." The animal died while being transported to Ellsworth.

W. J. Scott of Truro, Me., had a similar experience to relate, although his horse was alive when he arrived. He promptly sent the animal back and demanded his money.

ARREST MAN CHARGED WITH STEALING SON

NEWBURYPORT POLICE ARREST GEORGE F. ORMSBY FOR FEDERAL OFFICERS.

City Marshal Lattime and Deputy Marshal John McLean of Newburyport to-day arrested a man whom they believe to be George F. Ormsby of Washington, D. C., for whom the United States officers and Boston police have been searching for several days.

The charge against Ormsby is abduction and kidnapping his two-year-old son without the right of custody. He was divorced from his wife some time ago, and the child was given into the custody of his mother by the court. It is now charged that the father abducted the boy and removed him from Washington against an order of the court.

Marshal Lattime received notice four days ago that Ormsby was liable to go to Newburyport, and has been on the lookout for him ever since. Yesterday the Boston police notified him that Ormsby was actually in Newburyport, and the entire force of that city engaged in the search for him.

The arrest was made just as Ormsby, or Wilson, as the arrested man calls himself, was entering the Bon Marche, a Pleasant street department store. He protested against his arrest, and said that he was not the man the police were looking for. When the marshal insisted, however, he went with them quietly. At the police station he gave the name of George Wilson and again protested against being held.

The arrested man is fifty years of age, five feet and eight inches tall, and answers the description of Ormsby that is in the hands of the police. Marshal Lattime is satisfied that he has the man Chief Watts of Boston wants.

According to Chief Watts, he has been acting in this matter for the United States authorities, and on receiving word from Newburyport that Ormsby was in custody there he notified United States Marshal Guy Murchie.

Inspector Gleavy and Deputy United States Marshal Waters left for Newburyport at noon to bring the arrested man to this city.

Ormsby is a man of means, and was socially prominent in Washington. His wife's suit for divorce created a sensation at the capital when it was published.

MIRANDY ON GIVING ADVICE ✤ By DOROTHY DIX

"I'M DONE—done givin' advice!" exclaimed Mirandy, wrathfully. "Yassum, I'se through. I'se done quituated. I'se done shet up de shop whar I'se been handin' out words of wisdom an' comfort free, gratis, for nothin' for de las' forty years, an' ef anybody gits any helpful hints from me for de future dey has got to plank down deir good money just lak dey does at de fortune teller's.

"Yassum, I'se been done an' gone an' had my dose, an' when I gits enough of a thing, thank God I'se got sense enough to know hit.

"What makes me say whut I does is dis—I'se one of dese hean free hearted women dat is easy ridin' for deir friends. When I sees a pusson in trouble I jest natchully aches to wipe de tears from deir eyes, an' when I takes notice of a pusson what's makin' a fool of deirself, I mos' generally tries to save 'em from deir folly; which shows how much of a fool I is.

"Mo' den dat—I'se afflicted wid de fatal gift of sympathy, an' draws folks to tell me deir troubles deg lak a honey pot draws de flies.

"I bet I done listened to mo' tales of woe dan any odder sister in de chuch, an' ef I spent as much time wukin' for myself as I has wukin' to git odder folks out of scrapes, I'd be so rich dat I could hire dat Mr. Rockinfeller to tote in my coal for me an' take home my wash.

Gets Called a "Butter-In"

"But whut has I got for all dese good deeds? Does folks rise up to bless my name whenever I appears in public? Does men an' women fall on my neck an' say: 'Thank God, Sis Mirandy, for de advice dat you give me dat day, an' dat saved me from makin' a wreck of my life'? Does folks pint deir finger at me as I goes along de street an' say: 'Dere goes a oracle ef dere ever was one'?

"Nawm. Dey calls me behind my back a butter-in. Dey hates me for de truth I done told 'em, an' when I dies dar 'll be secret rejoicin' throughout de congregation; for ole Mirandy knows too many wives dat was on de ragged aidge of gittin' divorces, an' too many men dat axed her advice 'bout whedder hit would be a good thing to give up a good job an' fly wid some odder man's wife, or whedder dey had best stick to de place dat dey had, an' make sheep's eyes on de sly.

"Yas, Lawd, handin' out advice sho'ly is a thankless task, an' de next woman dat drops in at my house wid a shawl over her haid an' a eye blacked up, an' a tale 'bout how her husband beat her, an' wants to know my opinion of what a lady should do under dem circumstances, sho'ly is gwine to think dat she has struck de North Pole. She ain't gwine to git no words o' comfort an' good counsel, mingled wid tea an' toast, from me.

The Case of Maud Gladys

"I ain't forgot de day dat Maud Gladys come to me wid her back all black and blue, an' fo' little half-naked, half-starved chillen a-clingin' to her skirts, a-sayin' dat her husband had done come home drunk an' beat her, an' put her out of de house, after he done take all her wash money from her, an' she say will I be so good as to advise her whut to do.

"An' I say, as soon as I had done filled dem little niggers' stomachs wid bread an' molasses—an' dey sholy did look lak dey was de bottomless pit—dat so far as I could see dat a wife didn't have no duty to a drunken husband except to shake 'him as quick as she could, an' dat hit sholy was mo' her business to feed dem chillen dan hit was to buy whiskey for deir pa; an' sech bein' de case, dat my advice was to throw his clothes out of de window an' lock de do', so dat he would have to go to wuk an' support hisself instid of livin' in idleness on her washtub.

"Maud Gladys cry, an' sniffle, an' wipe her eyes on her apron, an' I give 'her a ole wrapper to wear, an' she say dat I sholy has spoke de words of wisdom, an' dat she'll be grateful to me de longest day she lives.

"But whut you think she do? She go away an' tell hit around de neighborhood dat I is tried to come between her an' her noble an' devoted husband, an' dat de only reason I ain't bust up her happy home is becaze she scorned de wicked counsel dat I give her.

"An' she an' her husband is always a sightin' at de top of de telephone posts so hard dat dey don't even see me when dey passes me on de street.

"Nelder is I done forgot de case of Lemeul Johnson, who axed my advice about marryin' Sally Ann Smithers. One day Lemeul took me aside, an' he says:

"'Sis Mirandy,' says he, 'bein' as how you is a lady dat has had experience in de holy estate of matrimony, an' furdermo' has been blest by de good Lawd wid a lot of horse sense, an' as you is knowed Sally Ann sence she was a baby, whilst I ain't never seed her except wid her Sunday manners and Sunday clothes on, I is come to set at yo' feet an' ax yo' advice 'bout de kind of wife she'd make a po' man whut is on de still hunt for a wife dat can hold up her end of de job, an' is got a mild temper, an' ain't got no objection to her husband belongin' to de lodge an' totin' a key of his own to de front do.'"

"'Lemeul,' 'spons I, 'I don't feel dat I'se got any call to mix up in odder folkses marryin' which is deir own fight.'

"'Sis Mirandy,' says he, 'I wouldn't dast to marry widout yo' passin' on de lady.'

"'Well, Lemeul,' 'spons I, 'you knows Sally Ann's maw.'

"At dat Lemeul gives a shiver, for Sis Tabithy, Sally Ann's maw, is de stringiest, cantankerousets, no accountest woman, wid a voice lak a file, and shes got Brer Eben dat henpecked dat he dassent speak above a whisper in his own house.

"'Well,' I goes on, 'whut Sis Tabithy is now, Sally Ann will be in fo' years after you marries her.'

"But dat phophesy, dough hit turned out as true as preachin', didn't keep Lemeul from marryin' de gal, an' I reckon he must have told her, because I warn't invited to de weddin' an nuther one of dem is ever darkened my do' from dat day to dis. Dat's all de thanks you git for holdin' up a red lantern to try an' warn yo' friends off from trouble.

Even Angelina Sue Got Sore

"An' den dere was Angelina Sue, whut had a idee dat she was cut out to be a actor lady on de stage. Angelina Sue came to me an' say:

"'Sis Mirandy, I come to ask yo' advice 'bout bein' one of dese heah opry singers, becaze I knows dat you will tell me de truth, an' I can depend on yo' word bein' de straight goods instid of flattery lak odder people hands me; an' so whilst I hates to take up yo' time, seein' as you have all of dem longery shut waists to do up for Miss Smith, still wid yo' permission I'll des do you a scene from Annhauser.'

"Wid dat Angelina Sue fetch a high note dat sound lak a cat call, an' den she mak a lot of sounds lak she was gogglin' a sore throat, an' den she makes a few passes at a cheer, whut she afterwards say she was makin' out was de hero, an' den she clinched wid hit, an' her voice sort of die away, an' hit was all over.

"'Angelina Sue,' says I, when she was done, 'I ain't up on de requirements of grand opry, but hit looks to me lak yo' voice is mo' fittin' to shoo chickens out of de gyarden dan hit is to bring down de house.

"'Furdermo',' says I, 'de way you wrastled wid dat cheer shows me dat you'd have a moughty fine grip on a broom; an' so ef you'll take my advice you'll espouse de career of a chambermaid instid of an actor lady.'

"But Angelina Sue didn't thank me for bein' puffectly honest wid her, lak she axed me to be. Nawm! She went away mad as a hornet, an' dough dey give her de hook when she tried to sing on de stage, she goes around a-aspersin' my character an' sayin' dat I was a po', ignorant ole woman dat ain't got no notion of whut art is.

"Yassum! Dat's whut you gits by givin' people advice, an' dat's de reason dat I'se done quituated. De only advice dat anybody can give dat folks will take, is to tell 'em to do whut dey was gwine to do any way, an' even den dey'll be sore at you when hit turns out wrong."

"Dat's all de thanks you git for holdin' up a red lantern to try an' warn yo' friends off from trouble"

Does Love Cheapen the Giver?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GREAT man has written that the trouble with women is they make themselves too cheap—too easy to men who do not appreciate them.

ll, perhaps he is right. A woman's de is almost invariably sacrificed to love. When she loves she loves, and else sinks into insignificance.

With men, almost without exception, bition comes ahead of love. Who ever ard of a man giving up a career for the e of a woman?

But thousands of women have given up career without a second thought, simply ause they loved a man.

If woman cheapens herself for man's e and man does not appreciate it, it to man's eternal disgrace.

A woman's conception of love is to give, always to give.

e may be mother, wife, sweetheart or , but always she is unselfishly pouring out her devotion at the feet of some being unselfish and forgiving means ening herself, then woman must guilty to the charge.

whole trouble lies in the fact that does not value that which comes to too easily.

t is not so much that woman makes self cheap as that man is inconstant.

woman's love does not wane because man to whom she gave it has grown ut and bald and rather tiresomely pompous.

But how about man? How many middle-aged men, looking at their tired, middle-aged wives, wish that the latter were young and beautiful?

It would be a natural thought if they wished that they themselves were also young and gallant; but not at all. It is new fields and pastures green they sigh for.

As far as unselfish loves is concerned, woman always has and always will cheapen herself, simply because she can't help herself.

Love Never Cheapens

It is sad, but true, that sometimes an utterly selfish woman will hold a man absolutely, but it is by sheer force of personality. Then it is the man who cheapens himself.

Love is too fine a thing to be desecrated by the term "cheapen." For perfect love is self-abnegation and sacrifice of self can never hurt the giver.

When a woman loves her one desire is to see the loved one happy. In every good woman's love there runs a strain of the maternal. That strain of maternal tenderness is the holiest thing about a woman. Like a brooding dove, her mind continually hovers over the welfare of the one she loves.

There is not a man on earth, no matter how base he may be, who has not at some hour of his life felt the heavenly sweetness of some woman's devotion.

That he has grown callous to it and deserted or dishonored it will weigh against him in the last great reckoning:

"When the sun grows cold,
And the stars grow old,
"And the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

NO ATTENTION TO IT

AR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young married woman. My band and I at present are boarding a public boarding house. There is another woman who takes her ls here, and she seems to have te a little to say and always gazes my husband, and, of course, he les at her and seems to always try look her down until she says "Good ning!" to him. Now, do you think married woman should do this? 't you think it would be much nicer would say "Good morning!" or ning" and pay no more attention to He and I have arguments about and he says if she were the last an on earth he would not be atted to her. Why does he do this? e is not a better man on earth to oman than he is to me; never is y from me only when he is at . Now, am I to blame when I fly nd get sore because this happens? both read your writings every evening.

ANXIOUS.

ear, men are always silly about that rt of thing, and if I were you I pay no attention. The woman is nd your best way is to be dignified ore her. Of course, your husband nothing of her. He is simply flat her notice of him. You say you have a fine husband, and I am glad you have. He will get over this fault, and in the meantime don't make yourself unhappy about it. He likes you better than any other woman. Of course, it would be kinder if he did not notice her, but don't fret. It will turn out all right.

WOULD NOT BE RESPECTFUL.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of twenty-three years and very much in love with a gentleman. He comes to see me every other night and I am sure he loves me, too, although he has not told me so. For some reason or other my mother makes objections to his calling so often, and only the other night told him as much. He went away very angry, and I am awfully afraid his pride will keep him from coming again to see me. I am really heartbroken, dear Miss Fairfax, and do not know what to do. Should I write him and tell him I do not mind the old people and only care for him, or what shall I do?

PERPLEXED.

IF you wrote and told him that you do not mind what your parents say, he would have a very poor opinion of you. Ask your mother if she objects to his calling twice a week, and, if she does not, write a nice note inviting him to call. If he cares for you he will be very glad to come back.

His Pa Writes a Song and His Ma Has Her Doubts About It

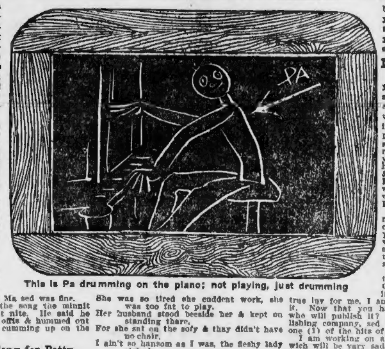
THE picter on my slait today is Pa drumming on the piano. Pa sed he was playing, Ma sed he was drumming, & Ma was rite. Ma sed that as a piano player Pa was a grate drummer boy.

The piece Pa is playing on the piano is a new song wich was wrote by him. Pa wrote the words & the musick both, & it is called You've Lost Yure Girlish Figger, Deer, but so has Mister Taft.

Pa rote the song to please Ma. Pa knows that Ma doesn't like to be so hevvy as she is, so he is all the time doing sumthing to maik her feel as happy as she can feel for her wate.

Ma thinks it is a fine song, it is the only song Pa ever rote, & it is the only thing Pa ever did that Ma sed was fine.

Pa toald us about the song the minnit that he got hoam last nite. He said he rote the words at the offis & hummed out the tune wen he was cumming up on the Subway.



This is Pa drumming on the piano; not playing, just drumming

Pa Rote One (1) Song for Patty

Beefore I play this song & sing it for you, sed Pa, I must tell you about a song that I rote for Adeleen Patty jest beefore she made her next to the last farewell apperence. It was called The Next to the Last Rose of Summer, sed Pa.

Cut that part of it out, sed Ma, & sing us the song wich you have jest rote. Let the ded past bury its ded, sed Ma, & strike up the band on the latest thing of wich yure wunderful brain has been capable of. So Pa started to sing his new song:

One (1) Verse.

A lady fat was setting in a city far away,
She was so tired she cuddent work, she was too fat to play.
Her husband stood beseide her & kept on standing thare,
For she sat on the sofy & thay didn't have no chair.
I ain't so hansom as I was, the fleshy lady sighed,
The husband kissed her dubble chin & pleasantly replied:

Korus:

I luv you jest as much to-day as in the days of yoar,
Wen yure waste was twenty inches, deer, insted of forty foar.
Sum of our gratest citizens is bilt jest like a raft.
You've lost yure girlish figger, deer, but so has Mister Taft.

When Pa got thru singing the song Ma didant know whether to feel glad or not. The music is fair, sed Ma, but I can't dope out the words. Is this song a knock or a boost? sed Ma. Are you riteing this song to show how much you luv me, or to show me up? Ma sed.

Lacks Intelleck

I am surprised at yure lack of intelleck, sed Pa, & dum-founded at yure sense of what is good & grate in the musical wurld. I suppose you cud set all nite lissening to reel works of geenyus like this song I have jest rote for you, & nevver know wen I was thru playing wether it was a cakewalk or a hymn, sed Pa.

With these few reemarks, sed Pa, I will close up the piano & put out the cat & wind the clock, Pa sed, & doant ever ask me to play for you aggenn.

I didant meen anything, deer, sed Ma. Of course if you ment it for to show yure true luv for me, I am vary glad you rote it. Now that you have rote it, sed Ma, who will publish it? The Harkshaw Publishing company, sed Pa. It ought to be one (1) of the hits of the seeson.

I am working on a other song, sed Pa, wich will be vary sad. It will be about a man wich was fishing off the coast of Maine & nevver came back. It will tell about his poor old mother, & his luving wife setting in the window waiting for him.

I am a littel in dout about the right line to finish the korus, sed Pa. I doant know whether to make it Beeneeth the Waves He's Sleeping Wile His Wife & Ma is Weeping, or to make the line Beeneeth the Waves He Slep but His Folks Thay Wasent Hep.

Maik it either way, sed Ma. After you have got it all reddy, maybe you can git Sweeney to sing it, Ma sed.

That's all I can think to rite about songs.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

BY THE PROFESSOR

FOR DEEP SCARS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please give me the formula for removing deep scars; one that contains mercury? You have given it before, but I did not then have need of it and did not preserve it. Deep scars from burns make me desire to secure something of the kind.

ALICE M.

TO lanoline add half the quantity of ointment of biniodide of mercury; mix well and rub in well once a day. I presume that this is the formula you mean, but remember that if the scars are deep you will have to have much patience, as it takes a long time sometimes to get the desired results. Do not use until the surface is entirely healed.

THREE QUESTIONS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Kindly tell me a remedy to remove tan from the face; also pimples. What is fattening for the body?

J. C. S.

PEROXIDE, lemon juice, buttermilk are all good to remove tan and to keep it from coming back. Witch hazel is also excellent. For the pimples, begin at the stomach and get it clean first, then diet and keep it clean. Prick the pimple with a needle which has been dipped in peroxide. After pressing out all the pus with a comedo extractor or by pressing on each side of the pimple with the padded part of the fingers in which you hold a piece of old linen, dab the pimples with peroxide, then anoint with a soothing cream. Before you begin this treatment open the pores by applying hot water to the face by means of a towel wet with hot water and folded several times. After you have finished the treatment dash the face with cold water. Peas, beans, potatoes and all starchy foods are fattening. Drink much water and exercise only what is necessary to good, healthy breathing. Sleep with plenty of fresh air in the room. Avoid all stimulants and eat little acid foods.

NOSE TOO THIN

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly advise me what to use to fatten my nose, as the bones show up very prominently, the rest of my face being plump? Is cocoa butter any good?

A. K. W.

MASSAGE with cocoa butter will probably help to fatten the nose. Massage gently until the butter is absorbed by the pores.

By a Woman Hater

MANY a man's awakening is due to his wife's dream of a bonnet.

Don't judge a woman by the company she is compelled to entertain.

A girl who is always fishing for compliments seldom hooks one worth while.

Marriage merely gives one woman the exclusive right to find fault with a man.

Did you ever see a woman offer to pay her street car fare before the conductor reached for it?

Occasionally a woman makes a fool of a man, but more often she makes him make a fool of himself.

It takes a woman to conceal the things she doesn't know, but a man's ignorance is always cropping out.

Sometimes a woman after paying $20 for a hat tells her friends it cost $30 and her husband that it cost $10.

It sometimes happens that a woman does a thing the way she wants to—unless her husband expects her to do it that way.

Perhaps you have noticed that when a woman says "There's no use talking" she keeps right on talking, just the same.

A woman is so used to pinning things that she can't understand why a man should make so much fuss about a missing button.

Adieu to Black Shoe Buttons

THERE are unmistakable assurances that the lowly black shoe button is going to be exalted in rank until it rivals the splendor of the modern hatpin. Along with the newly inaugurated practice of mingling tinted leather with black has come a yearning for something more decorative than the former dingy fastener, and already boots clasped with large pearl buttons are deemed decidedly orthodox. Next year we shall probably witness sartorial schemes in which the shoe buttons match the buttons on the coat and the coat buttons consult the stone adorning the hatpine.

And when this time comes the languid great lady of the stage, instead of drawing the conventional "Felice, get my hat with the blue feathers," will substitute, "Felice, won't you get my shoes with the turquoise buttons?"

Mothers of Great Men

THE FORCEFUL MOTHER OF MIRABEAU

By REV. THOS. B. GREGORY

MIRABEAU! What a name that is! In all the long and glorious annals of oratory, where shall we find a greater one?

See this description of the King of the Tribune in action:

"His lion face is wrinkled and distorted. His eyes shoot forth flame, he roars, he stamps, he shakes the fierce mass of his hair, all white with foam.

"Escaping from his froth-covered mouth are broken exclamations, tones of thunder and accents of heart-rending and terrible pathos. He is transported and he transports the assembly.

"With extraordinary force he abandons himself to the torrent of his eloquence, and sweeps on like the storm, and yet he never leaves his course. He masters others by his sovereign sway, because he never for an instant loses his own self-control."

The most terrific, irresistible, overpowering of orators, the greatest that the world has seen since Demosthenes, perhaps, and by no one, save the immortal Athenian, surpassed or even equalled.

"The creator of the Declaration of the Rights of Man," the friend of the people, and yet the everlasting lover of order, the only man in all France who could have carried the revolutionists through without the "Reign of Terror," and the man who would have done that had he been permitted to live.

Memorable Words

A noble and yet the leader of the Third estate against the Nobility, he ventured to compare himself to Gracchus, and to the proud nobles who had threatened him with death he made his ever-memorable reply:

"Thus perished the last of the Gracchi by the hands of the Patricians. But, having received the mortal blow, he flung toward heaven a handful of dust, attesting the avenging gods, and from that dust arose Marius—Marius less renowned in having exterminated the Cimbri than in having quelled the aristocracy of Rome."

Having thus paid his compliment to the beribboned, power-proud gentlemen of the Nobility, he closed by reminding them of the fact that they could not forever trifle with Justice, bidding them his final adieu in the famous words: "Privileges must have an end, but the People is eternal"—words that should be printed in large letters on the title-page of every book and newspaper coming from the presses of all lands, and displayed in flaming characters in all places, in all countries, when men congregate.

Victor Requetti, the Marquis of Mirabeau, and the father of the subject of this little paper, had in Mary Genevieve of Vassan a most remarkable wife. Ugly as sin she was, with the body and heart of an Amazon, a total stranger to fear, a fighter that neither looked for nor gave quarter, of volcanic passion, boundless in resources, of unconquerable determination.

Such was the mother of Mirabeau, the "Grand Potentate of the Tribune," the Jupiter of orators, whose voice was supreme wherever heard, whose tempestuous eloquence swept everything before it.

An Amazing Mother

This amazing mother, who could present the front of a lioness to the world, was all tenderness to her remarkable son.

She loved the terrible boy with a devotion that knew no bounds; but in all likelihood he was about the only human being toward whom her heart went out in any sort of genuine affection, he was so like herself, and every one else was so different from her.

For fifteen years Mirabeau's father lived with his wife, during which period she had brought him eleven children. Then, suddenly, another woman came upon the scene and the family was practically broken up.

For fifteen years afterward the battle between the Marquis and his insulted wife raged with fury. Every day of this long time the home was rent by the criminations and recriminations, by the curses and counter curses of a pair of passionate, fiery, resolute souls, neither of which would ever think of surrendering.

Young Mirabeau took his mother's side of the quarrel, and in championing her cause against the immoral brute of a father, learned the first lessons in the remorseless, scorching, irresistible speech which later on was to make him the foremost orator of his day and generation.

A pessimist, a cynic and a libertine, Mirabeau respected and loved the woman who bore him, and was ever to her a most affectionate and dutiful son.

With all of her faults—and her faults were many—she was his mother, and was withal, a woman of virtuous life, rough, volcanic, terrible when crossed, but generous in thought and clean in deeds; and her powerful son did all that was within his power to safeguard her honor and peace.

For this his father hated him; but the son kept right on standing by his mother, for which fact Mirabeau should ever be looked upon with a large degree of admiration.

Bad as he was, he was good to his mother. False as he was to most of the commands of the moral law, he was ever true to the woman whose arms first enfolded him, and whose breast first gave him nourishment.

How to Frame Photographs

PERHAPS nothing so stamps a house with the individuality of the owner as the photographs that grace tables and mantels. Be the sofa cushions arranged ever so well, the chairs placed in the most cozy fashion, the lamps in just the right spots, if there are no photographs, no pictures, the whole aspect of the place will be uninhabited.

For this reason it is advisable to take photographs to even the most temporary of Summer homes, and there are many attractive ways to arrange these pictures so that they will not be injured by the dampness that drifts through open windows, whether at seashore, mountains or country.

Small ones, for instance, may be fastened on a strip of unbleached linen and hung so that they will not be bent or torn. They may also be mounted on linen-covered cardboard and protected by glass. This last is a particularly good way to care for those of a large size.

Another way is to get a stiff piece of cardboard—any box lid will do—and cover the corners with triangular pockets of linen, into which the pictures may be slipped. The general effect is good, and the photograph is thereby saved from destruction.

A large frame for several photographs may be made by taking the top and bottom of a cardboard box—for then both pieces will be the same size—cutting holes in one of them the proper shape for the pictures and leaving the other for the back of the frame. Cover them both with cretonne, which may be pasted on; put them together and bind them with braid, which no dampness can displace. The cretonne may be fitted around the holes by cutting it so there will be one-half inch to snip, turn in and paste to the under side—thus leaving no unsightly puckers.

CLUBWOMEN IN FINAL SESSION OF CONVENTION

General Council of Federation Meets in Potter Hall; Delegates Leave for Home.

PRAISE HUB HOSTESSES

With a meeting of the general council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Potter Hall to-day the ninth biennial convention, which has been in session here for the past ten days, comes to a close. The general council is composed of the officers of the general federation, the State federations and other officers. The meeting to-day was only preparatory to the Fall meeting of the council and no business of any importance was transacted.

About two-thirds of the delegates, alternates and other visitors departed for their homes to-day. The remaining third will spend more or less of the Summer at New England Summer resorts. The members of the local biennial board are taking a rest after the arduous duties as hostesses to anywhere from 5,000 to 15,000 visitors, with the consciousness of having done that duty well and with the praise of their guests ringing in their ears.

The delegates are well pleased with their visit to Boston. The retiring president, Mrs. Sarah S. Platt Decker of Denver, voiced the sentiment of all in an interview given to an AMERICAN reporter to-day:

"The Boston biennial has been a blessed homecoming to many of us, and a glorious privilege to us all. There has never in the history of the General Federation been a more splendidly helpful and enjoyable convention. There has been perfect harmony throughout. Our hostesses have been tireless in their efforts in our behalf, both during the convention sessions and on the pilgrimages to the historic shrines in which this vicinity abounds. The ninth biennial will long be remembered by all who have had the privilege of attending it."

COOLING PARK JUST RIGHT FOR THIS WEATHER

This is the sort of weather that makes the Sunday American Outing Club long for the cool forest shade of Lexington Park, the beautiful woodland resort, where fifty acres are given over to prime good amusement.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN free ticket crowds this week found Lexington Park all that it was claimed to be and more, too, and they greatly enjoyed the dainty little Summer show, "Helen of Troy," in the Rustic theatre.

Next week there will be other attractions at Lexington Park. The Rustic theatre will again be free to SUNDAY AMERICAN readers on Monday and Tuesday. Admission to the park carries with it a seat in the theatre and to the wonderful zoological garden.

Next Sunday's free ticket will admit to the park, theatre and to the fun contrivances and sights of the grove and the sports of the recreation grounds.

The park also has a fine restaurant and ballroom.

HUDSON ELKS PLAN OUTING FOR THE 4TH

Are you an Elk?

Want a nice, quiet little Fourth?

Fort Meadow Picnic Grounds sound cooling like?

Hudson Lodge, No. 959, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks—for short the "best people on earth"—has made the Fort Meadow Picnic Grounds a bower of peace and comfort for the glorious Fourth. Here, if nowhere else in Massachusetts, firearms, firecrackers and other explosives will positively not be allowed on the grounds.

Every Elk in Massachusetts, and they number some thousands, has been invited to herd with his kind for the day.

The committee of arrangements is made up of Messrs. Thomas F. Tierney, chairman; William A. Pierson, secretary; C. A. Molloy, F. H. Sawyer, A. E. Holmes, J. F. Burkell and T. J. Butler.

The epicurean features of the day will be a guaranteed, genuine, old-fashioned Rhode Island clambake. A programme of sports will be in running order at 9 o'clock in the morning. Dinner will be served at 2 in the afternoon. On the arrival of electric cars barges will be in readiness in Wood square, Hudson.

HAVERHILL MAN SHOT IN ROW

HAVERHILL, July 1.—Word has been received here from San Francisco that, as a result of a shooting affray in a cafe in that city Sunday, Harry A. Harris of this city, hospital steward on the battleship Georgia, was shot and injured so seriously that he may die.

Philip A. Becker, boatswain's mate on the Illinois, is under arrest, charged with the shooting. The shooting is said to have resulted from Harris's objecting to Becker allowing a nineteen-year-old member of the crew of the Illinois to drink whiskey.

KING BACK ON THE JOB AS "FINANCIAL AGENT"

STOCK PROMOTER WAITING TRIAL OPENS UP FOR BUSINESS AT OLD STAND.

Cardenio Flavius King, he of King-Crowther fame, etc., etc., has given a surprise to Pemberton square and Exchange place by getting back on his job as stock promoter and "financial agent" while out on $25,000 bail and awaiting trial for larceny in thirty-one counts, following his indictment by the Grand Jury.

King's ads used to read "Entire fourth floor of Journal building." He isn't doing any advertising as yet, but it is quietly announced that he is preparing to resume business at the old stand in a few days, but it's only half the fourth floor now.

Even his friends did not believe that King would begin "promoting" anew until he had appeared for trial in the Superior Court this Fall, and they are still wondering what particular brand of bonanza he will exploit for the benefit of needy New England.

Marvel at His Nerve.

Even King's enemies, however, admit that he's resourceful, but they marvel at his nerve.

Now that he has bobbed up serenely after a flight of four months through Europe, Asia and Africa, they say they would not be surprised to see him out in a new auto. The old one went for a song at auction.

That King will follow his old methods is evident from his preparations for business. Fine fittings, mahogany furniture and oriental rugs are being installed in the "luxurious offices," and he has already engaged a number of gracious staff assistants, men and women.

King says he will take up his business right where he left it and that his aides are now endeavoring to straighten out his books, which, by the way, proved a hard task for the receiver and trustee in bankruptcy.

Whence Came His Funds.

Where King got the money to refurnish his offices and to start up in business is what is puzzling his former clients who paid him for stocks. It is stated that the promoter has been in New York recently endeavoring to raise funds. This he found impossible last February when he went to the wall, and it was then that he took the Etruria for Liverpool.

Lee M. Friedman of No. 53 State street, who was named by the creditors as trustee in bankruptcy, gives King his first examination in the Exchange Building at 2 o'clock this afternoon. This procedure is expected to last several weeks, and will be conducted in private. The trustee will ask the bankrupt many pointed questions as to his resources and liabilities.

Creditors Clamoring.

The creditors who lost their savings through investments with King have been clamoring anew for their money ever since the missing man returned to Boston, and Mr. Friedman will act in their interests to ascertain if there are any tangible assets with which to satisfy their claims.

His counsel, Herbert L. Baker, will be admitted to the secret examination of the bankruptcy case.

The promoter has been at his old and new quarters for the last two or three days superintending matters, and though not open for business, has been willing to meet all callers with his old time gracious smile.

King to "Show New Things."

In discussing his plans Mr. King says:

"For some little time to come I expect to be real busy straightening out the tangle into which my business affairs were thrown as a result of my departure. Just as soon as I can get at my books and find out how I stand and who I owe, and who owes me, a decisive step toward progress will have been made.

"If the actions of one firm, which declares that I owe them $80,000, and who instead owe me $30,000, is any criterion, my supposed liabilities of over half a million will dwindle until they will have a herculean task in finding that I owe anybody.

"The former C. F. King Company is again being incorporated and I will be closely identified with it. Since my return several friends have come to me and have offered me financial backing, and at no very distant date I will show the financial world a few 'new things' that they never dreamed of.

"As it was never a habit of mine to be idle I will be at my offices daily from 9 o'clock in the morning to 5 o'clock in the afternoon."

Letters and other pamphlets notifying the public of Mr. King's resumption of business will be sent out this week.

BIG INCREASE IN CITY DEBT

The monthly statement of City Auditor Mitchell, to issue in a few days will show a very material increase in Boston's gross and net funded debt of the city during the past month as the result of the issue on June 4 of $4,419,000 new four per cent. bonds.

On May 31 last the gross funded debt was $104,230,706 and the net debt $70,653,673.

FATAL PLUNGE DOWN SHAFT

Pitching head first into an airshaft while walking on the roof of Brandon Hall, Brookline, shortly after 10 o'clock last night, Herman Seffiner of Somerville, who was employed as cook at the hotel, was instantly killed by falling three stories to the ground floor.

Seffiner had complained of the excessive heat in his room and it was while seeking a place to sleep on the roof that he tripped and fell into the shaft. The dead man was forty years of age, married and lived at No. 405 Washington street, Somerville.

200 SLAIN IN PERSIAN MASSACRE

ST. PETERSBURG, July 1.—More than 200 contestants have already been killed and a massacre is regarded as certain to have resulted at Tabriz, Persia, according to a dispatch received here this evening.

LONDON, July 1.—The situation at Tabriz, Persia, continues to be very serious. Private dispatches received here say that the people have erected barricades in the streets, and the fighting is going on night and day. Tabriz and the entire province of Azerbaijan are strongholds of the revolutionists and the arrival there of troops to strengthen the forces of the Shah has increased the danger of the situation. The entry of the troops to the city is opposed by the revolutionary forces.

MAE WOOD IS INDICTED ON TWO CHARGES

NEW YORK, July 1.—Two indictments, one charging perjury and the other forgery, were returned to-day by the Grand Jury against Mae Wood, who recently sued Senator Thomas Platt for divorce, alleging that she was married to him on November 9, 1901, in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, by the Rev. Edward W. Rice. The suit was thrown out of court when it developed that the marriage license which Miss Wood presented as the one given her by the minister in 1901 was not printed until 1903.

The indictments charge that Mae Wood committed perjury on May 18, before Justice O'Gorman, when she testified that she and the Senator were married in 1901, and also when she identified a letter alleged to have been written December 10, 1906, in which Senator Platt was made to admit that Miss Wood was his legal wife.

The forgery indictment charges that Mae Wood wrote the letter of December, 1906.

Miss Wood is now in the West, being out on $5,000 bail. She will return at once to plead on the indictment.

NOTED TROTTERS TO MEET AT READVILLE

Even with Sonoma Girl (2:05¼) not to start, the general public were so anxious to see the other fast trotters entered in the big free-for-all trot scheduled for Readville July 4 that Secretary Charles M. Jewett has concluded to have another race with Major Delmar (1:59¾), Sweet Marie (2:02) and Wilkesheart (2:06¼) for a sweepstakes of $2,500 on the same day.

This is another shift in the horses outside of losing Sonoma Girl, as in the place of George G. (2:05¼), Alta McDonald has substituted Major Delmar, the champion trotting gelding of the world.

McDonald has been at Readville with his horses since last week, while Billy Andrews with Sweet Marie and Trainer Stelle with Wilkesheart arrived at the track this forenoon.

It is bound to be a redhot tussle between the three. Major Delmar needs nothing to be said about his speed, while Sweet Marie has been doing all that has been asked of her this season at Poughkeepsie, miles around 2:08 being apparently play for the mare. Wilkesheart has not been better than 2:09¼, but he made a reputation last year of being a bulldog in a race, and is always ready early to trot to the limit of his speed. He made Sonoma Girl step at Lexington last Fall in 2:05¼. Among his victories of 1907 is the classic Charter Oak stake against the pick of the country, including Sonoma Girl.

TOMMY QUILL BEATS ERNE IN TWELVE ROUNDS

The biggest citizen in Brockton to-day is Tommy Quill, the dapper little knight of the fists, for didn't he lick the best boy from Philadelphia, the noted Yi Ti Erne, whose reputation is even known out on the Coast, but when it came to testing the maulies between the Bay State and Sleepy Village lads, why of course there was nothing to it.

The little test of courage and biff science took place at the Armory A. A., and was of twelve rounds duration, which [illegible] quite enough for the Quaker with the [illegible] topknot, and it needed no more to [illegible] winner, the result, besides going to [illegible]ill, gave him a big revenge for the last [illegible]me they met on the same spot. Erne [illegible]cured a draw but Quill decided to cut out any chances at draws and was primed up to the top notch to pitch his foe out of the ring if necessary.

Some idea of the fierce character of the [illegible]ill can be gleaned by the fact that twice [illegible]he boys had to be pulled apart, as they [illegible]sisted on going longer than the regular three-minute rounds, and in one of these extended journeys the seconds of both sides joined in, and there was a merry mixup which was not down on the card, [illegible]ut the extra attraction only helped to add [illegible]re to the sizzling go.

Quill Boxed at His Best.

[illegible]uill has been seen in some pretty stiff [illegible]s, but last night he showed off the [illegible] of any time he has appeared in the [illegible] ring, and he had to extend himself. [illegible]e was facing a rival who ranks among [illegible] headliners, but Tommy was out for [illegible]ness from the outset, and the way he [illegible] on punishment to his adversary will [illegible] him for a few days. When they last [illegible]t Erne damaged Quill's nose and it [illegible]thered him and was largely accountable [illegible]r his not gaining the decision on that oc[illegible]sion, so Tommy changed his tactics [illegible]mewhat and paid some attention to [illegible]rne's celebrated left and knocked it down [illegible] beat him to the punch.

With his best asset apparently dis[illegible]unted, Erne was shy on means of a[illegible]k and was easier to get at for Quill, [illegible] was quick to see and accept every [illegible]vantage.

There was some fear that the bout would [illegible] go the full distance, as Quill got mov[illegible] fast in the fifth round, and slammed [illegible] a bunch of sleep pills which nearly [illegible] Erne on the shelf.

[illegible]e attributes his downfall to Quill's [illegible] attack. It was evident that Quill [illegible]nded to weaken Erne if he could by [illegible]nding him below the ribs, and every [illegible]e the Quaker led he was countered on [illegible] wind region with a steamy left or right [illegible] he generally got a few jolts added [illegible] they were clinched. This kind of [illegible]ardment distressed Erne, and every [illegible] he went to his corner his seconds [illegible]hed his offended anatomy with the best [illegible]assage, but rarely a round slipped by [illegible] Quill did not plant some of his heavy [illegible] into the mid section and make Erne [illegible]n good shape.

[illegible]ill did not lose sight of the jaw at [illegible]time and got in some dazers which [illegible] Erne to cover up to cut off the [illegible]ent.

[illegible] was on tap with all his reputed [illegible]ss and a good hunk of weight be[illegible] help him out, but these were no obstacles to the Brocktonite, who was out to win, no matter what he was up against.

Some Heavy Wrestling.

The way he pushed the heavy Erne around the ring when the latter tried some wrestling tactics aroused a storm of enthusiasm, and the Slowtown boxer found his match every time.

Up to the eighth round Quill easily stood in front in every session. Then Erne started jumping around the ring, pecking with his left, which had Quill up in the air, as he could not reach his man, but when Quill got him in range, Erne's flash went up in smoke.

In the opening round Quill had Erne twice on the ropes, driving in hooks with both hands and was putting it all over the visitor. Erne cut loose some in the second and missed a right and left swing when Tommy ducked. The Quaker did some fancy stepping, which phazed Tommy for an instant, but he found him and hammered him with rights and lefts.

Soon after the bell in the third Tommy ripped over a left hook to the body which seemed to sink in several inches. Erne, by clever blocking, saved himself a lot of trouble.

The fifth was nearly the completion of Erne's career. The Quaker started out of his corner like a shot and met a well timed left hook to the jaw and a few seconds later a smash from a right on the same mark staggered Erne and he hung on. Tommy savagely tore in to plant another and rained them on, but could not connect with the proper power before Erne had a come-back, but at the bell Erne got another soak on the jaw.

Both resorted to stabbing in the sixth, countering perfectly, which nettled Erne, and Tommy began beating him to the punch. In the seventh Quill handed out some terrific body welts and had Erne wearing a weary look at the bell.

The eighth was a repetition of the previous round with Quill leading the way, tearing up Erne's body so that he stalled all he could to avoid taking it.

Erne Did Clever Stepping.

Erne switched to foot work in the ninth, simply using his left and running around Quill, who could not get him within range till the round was nearly used up.

Going to the end Quill endeavored to keep on top but Erne, sore in body, was game and put on rallies. They were in a hot mixup in the tenth and refused to stop till separated by Referee Donnelly. The same thing happened in the eleventh and one of Erne's seconds was fired out of the ring for using more force than was necessary in the melee.

The feature bout held the most attention, but the colored championship affair between Young Jack Johnson of Goldfield, and Young Joe Walcott, was as big a mirth provoker as one of Hap Ward's star comedies.

Walcott substituted Young Slater, who sent word that he did not care for the title at the last moment. They tried to bore holes through each other for six rounds, Walcott being the receiver of the greatest number of dents and showed signs of distress by swinging low and using his head like a battering ram. Champion Johnson mildly remonstrated and stuck to his job, urged on by the real Joe Walcott in his corner, and got the decision.

Billy Griffin and John Collins went six rounds to a draw and Eddie Carr won a decision over Kid McDonald of Chelsea in eight rounds.

President Frank B. Hower's Automobile Club of Buffalo made another new record on its recent orphans' day, when 1,577 children were taken out riding in 227 cars. It was the fourth annual celebration of the Buffalo motoring organization, and the members of the club are declaring without much danger of successful contradiction that they cared for more children that day than any other club ever did before.

CLAYMOS AND DODIE K. THE STARS IN SPEEDWAY RACES

BY ED. COGSWELL.

Claymos pacing a half in 57¾ seconds, and Chase meeting defeat from Dodie K. and Tommy R., is certainly excitement enough for one afternoon, but in the regular weekly matinee of the Metropolitan Driving Club at Charles River speedway the sport was so high-class all through that the feature attractions were only as parts of the regular bill.

On account of the shower early in the afternoon the racing was on Soldiers road, which runs beside the regular speedway. For this reason, while the record of Claymos stands in securing the speed cup offered for the pacer winning the fastest heat during the Spring series, yet the record for the speedway proper remains at the mark set by My Star on June 9 of 59 seconds.

Soldiers road, or the upper drive, as it is called, is considerable faster than the speedway, especially for pacers and trotters that are strictly sound. It is firm and all the way as smooth as a billiard table. With the wind playing in the back of the horses they can step over it like being shot out of a cannon.

A Great Two-Horse Race.

There was never a better two-horse race decided than that between Claymos and Phoebon W. Robert Thompson had the mount behind the former, while West Furbush did the honors with the veteran Phoebon W., that can always be relied upon to make a race from the drop of the hat.

In both heats the pair flew the length of the course nearly lapped, it not being till nearing the wire that Phoebon W. went to breaks and in consequence dropped back a length at the finish. The time of the second heat was in 1:00¼. Two sensational heats.

Chase Has Wings Singed.

It was only a select few who anticipated that Chase would get his wings singed in the fast trot. Up to date C. H. Belleden and his gelding have had matters all their own way in the matinees, and such a foregone conclusion did this appear that Mr. Belleden had taken his trotter over to the Readville track to have him prepared for some of the matinees there, but John Dorey of the race committee in making up the events for the speedway concluded that Dodie K. was capable of giving the champion all he could do.

In the initial heat H. B. Ralston barely won with Tommy R. in 1:02¾, but after that he was not a factor through behaving badly. The second heat Chase led all the way till nearing the wire, when Mr. Furbush turned Dodie K. loose with such a rush that she quickly closed the gap and was at the finish on equal terms. This made a dead heat, the time being in 1:00¼.

It was easier in the two following trips for the black mare, as after Chase had held command to the final eighth of the distance she came with so much speed that Mr. Belleden saw it was useless and took Chase back, allowing Dodie K. to win handily. The time of these heats was 1:01¼, 1:02¾.

Lord Quex Was Invincible.

Walter Corbett won a great race with Lord Quex over J. E. C. and Red Bird. In the first heat he made a break at the word, falling ten lengths to the rear, but came so fast from that point that he nipped the heat by a nose over J. E. C. in 1:04½.

The next trip Walter Farmer with the initial horse kept to his knitting the entire half-mile, but this made no difference in the result, as while Lord Quex made a break in the first quarter, yet he had that turn of speed that when straightened out he was invincible, and the time of the second heat was 1:02¾.

W. J. McDonald, the owner of Claymos, had his day made complete by driving to victory his other pacer, Little Sidney. May Patchen took the opening heat in 1:04½, but then Mr. McDonald turned the steam on full blast, taking off the blue ribbon in a couple of close drives, the time being 1:01, 1:01½.

Bellows Finally Succeeds.

"If you don't at first succeed, try, try again," is a pretty apt saying, and likely this is the reason that Fred H. Bellows has kept pegging at it all the Spring. His reward came yesterday with Ashland Bett, as by turning the trick with her he secured his first blue ribbon of the year at Charles River speedway. It was a good race to capture, too, as after losing the first heat to Lady Band in 1:04, Ashland Bett came to her own the two following in 1:04, 1:03¾.

E. A. Bayley never had such a good time in his life as in racing at the speedway the past four weeks. He has been racing his driving gelding, Pandorus, and has yet to suffer defeat, his record now being four straight wins. In this matinee he was pitted against Billy Wilkes and Hills Boy, and dropped the second heat to Billy Wilkes in 1:07, but then Mr. Bayley settled for strict business and the result was that the time of Pandorus's third heat was 1:03. New fields for Pandorus to tackle is the word for next week, the final matinee of the Spring series.

West Furbush Shows a Trotter.

West Furbush showed another trotter during the afternoon in Captain, he winning off the reel over Billy Ross and Rose Autograph in 1:05¾, 1:02¾, and had something up his sleeve each time.

The remaining winners were Maud Blend (C. G. Newcomb), in 1:05½; Nancy Grayson (M. D. Jones), in 1:08¾; Alclay H. (J. Doherty), in 1:08; Bobby Patchen (E. A. Fuller), in 1:14; Wild Fern (G. N. Coyle), in 1:05; Russell B. (R. E. Thompson), in 1:05½, and Lanter (C. A. Thompson), in 1:05.

During the racing Walter Farmer looked Lord Quex (2:10¼) over with the view of buying him from Walter Corbett, and in this case he will turn him over to James Carpenter to prepare for the Readville matinees.

KETCHEL CANCELS BOUT.

CHICAGO, July 1.—The Ketchel-Caponi match has been definitely declared off. Silvy Ferretti, Caponi's manager, received the news in a letter from Promoter Lynch. Ketchel could not get into condition is the reason given out by his manager for calling the affair off after the Grand Rapids promoters had gone to an expense of $300 in arranging matters.

GET PITCHER FOR CARLISLE.

KANSAS CITY, July 1.—The Boston American League team has picked Joe Wood as the most likely looking young pitcher on Monte Cross's staff. Wood will join the Boston club next Spring in return for Outfielder Carlisle.

COLLINS TO RACE M'LEAN ON HOLIDAY

Elmer Collins rides his first race in this country on the Fourth of July at the Revere track. The Lynn rider, after a successful tour abroad, is now on the Atlantic hurrying to this side to appear against Hugh MacLean in the holiday card at the Revere track, and will receive one of the greatest welcomes ever accorded an athlete who has ever invaded the foreign shores and returned after beating the best in the game.

Collins created a furore in France by defeating the veterans in the motor-paced ranks, and is put on the same rating as Bobby Walthour and other noted American bikers who have won the greatest laurels.

The event between him and MacLean will be a three-heat race at fifteen, ten and five miles, and at the distances Collins should be able to beat the champion, as he was invincible at sprints behind the motors before he left these shores.

Collins's last performance before sailing was the defeat of Parent, the fast Frenchman, at the Buffalo track behind the big motors, which travel faster than a mile a minute, and he is in fine form to race here.

FAST HORSES IN RACES AT COMBINATION

Every indication points to a couple of days of fine racing at Combination Park on July 3 and 4, which marks the first regular race meeting of the season in New England. The liberal amount of money offered has attracted a high class lot of horses, which insures a genuine contest for the lion's share of the purse from the word "Go."

W. NELSON HOPES GANS WILL MIX IT UP

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

LOS ANGELES, July 1.—Jim Jeffries hoisted his massive frame into a big red automobile and paid an official visit to Packy McFarland's Vernon training camp. The Chicago fighter was waiting for Jim and was all ready to weigh in for him. The scales were set at 134 pounds, but the beam only quivered when Packy stepped aboard. His exact weight was 133½ pounds. Jeff asked for a look at McFarland's "injured" hand, a request that caused the stock yards boy to grin. There is just a slight suspicion of a bruise on one of his fists, but in the main the story was one of Harry Gilmore's dreams. McFarland's condition is A1.

Welsh went through another strenuous day's work at his Venice camp. The little Britisher scouts the idea that there is any danger of his going stale. "If I didn't work hard this way I would not be able to put up my best fight on Saturday," said Welsh.

The Dane is, if anything, over-confident. He said: "Before I met Gans at Goldfield I own that I had some little doubts as to whether I could lick him. Before we were warmed up in that fight I knew I was his master, and there hasn't been a day of my life since that I have not held the same opinion. He talks of beating me in twenty rounds, and for that matter one of his betting commissioners has wagered $500 with me that I will be beaten in twenty rounds.

"When Gans talks that way its music to my ears. I am in hopes that when he says I am to be licked in twenty rounds it means that he's coming right at me. If he does so the fight will be over in far less than twenty rounds and that Nelson will be the indisputed champion lightweight. I don't know what kind of condition Gans is in, but if he fights the way he fought Unholz I'll lick him inside of six rounds."

MUNIC TROTS IN 2:11 AT READVILLE

Another trotter has turned Readville in 2:11 this year, it being the gelding Munic, 2:16¼, that Alta McDonald let loose his head for a mile in that time, and he came the final half in 1:04¼. The railbirds say he is sure "ready money."

Jimmy Carpenter worked the two-year-old Echo Todd a couple of miles in 2:25¾ and 2:26¼, the best for the age for a New England colt this season.

Henry Titer worked his two-year-old Eros, brother of Blue Hill, in 2:29½. Both of these youngsters are heavily engaged in Futurity stakes, their first start being in the American Horse Breeder Futurity at Readville next month.

Bob Lundy is beginning to step along his $50,000 American trotting Derby candidate, Kim, he turning the course handily in 2:14¼. He is a member of the Hall string.

Over at Combination Park the best mile of the season is held by Gloria, 2:10¼, driven by her owner, Frank Fox, in 2:13¼. Several others at the half-mile track have been close to that notch.

GOODALE CREW CAPTAIN.

Next Saturday afternoon the interscholastic eight-oared crew will row in the intermediate class in the Fourth of July regatta on the Charles River. Alfred M. Goodale, who captained the championship Cambridge Latin crew, has been elected captain of the eight.

RACE FOR SIX-OARED CREWS.

A special race will be given at North End Park Saturday at 11 a. m. for six-oared barge, United States life-saving crews over a one-mile course from North Park to U. S. S. Wabash buoy and return. Entries will close Friday with Captain Gabriel Farrell at the Charlesbank boathouse, or W. P. Jackson, treasurer of U. S. V. L., 17 Milk street, Boston.

RACING AT SARATOGA.

NEW YORK, July 1.—It has been announced that the Saratoga Racing Association will race the first eleven days of its meeting, which will not conflict with the Yonkers meeting. It will be determined later whether there will be racing on additional days.

EASTERN LEAGUE RESULTS.

A Good Dinner Can Be Bought for Five Cents

Cooked Food at Reasonable Prices One of the Great World Needs

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

The genius of business men has done wonders to promote the distribution of manufactured products, thus employing labor and supplying public needs. Great department stores, great slaughter houses and great RAW FOOD distributing organizations have done marvels. The guiding minds back of them are entitled to gratitude.

But one of the most important problems, the distribution of COOKED FOOD at reasonable rates, has been almost entirely neglected in this country.

The average American family spends for what goes into its stomach as much as for all other purposes probably. This is especially true in big families of moderate means.

Cooking is expensive and it takes time. In thousands of families, unfortunately, the women as well as the men are at work. Industry grabs everything it can—men, women and children are crowded into the mill and turned out in dividends whenever it is possible.

There are thousands of women that try to do a day's work and at the same time cook for a husband before the day's work begins and after it ends.

The greatest kind of a blessing—under our atrociously mismanaged civilization—would be energetic and able mercantile distribution of wholesome, properly cooked food at reasonable prices. We are not talking of any CHARITY or philanthropy, but of common sense and a great public need that could be combined with profit.

A young woman in New York City, Miss Mabel Kittredge, has undertaken this task on a small scale and has done wonderfully well. She has shown great executive ability. Her work is especially valuable as an example and proof of what CAN be done.

Miss Kittredge, at No. 543 West Forty-ninth street, sells a good meal for five cents. All food must be taken away; none of it is eaten on the premises. Her customers—working people in her immediate neighborhood—are growing in number. She has about a hundred a day now. She ought to have a thousand.

One day, for the five cents invested, Miss Kittredge gives her customers a good, substantial meat stew. Another day corned beef, cabbage and potatoes. Another day pea soup. Another day clam chowder (that particular thing we DON'T recommend).

These dinners are prepared scientifically, so that they constitute what is called "a balanced ration," being worked out scientifically, the same as the regular ration in the army. A dinner for five cents represents a good, solid dinner for a workingman—about enough for two children. Desserts are sold for three cents.

All this is done by Miss Kittredge on a business basis—no taint of charity. Her customers pay cash, never ask favors or credit. Needless to say this young woman disdains any idea of personal profit. She realizes sensibly that everything must be business-like. The people that buy her five-cent dinners owe her nothing but recognition of her ability. She has a first-class cook and buys only first-class material.

What a great thing it would be, especially in these hard times, if there were in each big city a hundred places like Miss Kittredge's, and what a wonderful thing if there were a hundred MISS KITTREDGES working as sensibly in Boston!

To sell cooked food, hot, cheap, good, in a hundred places in any big city would be the greatest possible blessing to that city.

The manager of such a concern could, if he chose, make a very good profit in addition to rendering a great public service.

In Paris a small butcher named Duval had his wife cook up the scraps of meat into a good soup, which he sold at the door of the butcher shop to workingmen for three cents a bowl—a piece of bread thrown in. From that beginning developed the admirable Duval restaurants of Paris.

The genius of that butcher and his wife, giving good cooked food at a cheap price, still feeds tens of thousands of Parisians splendidly. The butcher left twenty millions of francs when he died.

His son, it is true, after he got the twenty millions, gave a famous and elaborate banquet NOT of the Duval type, got up in the middle of the banquet and blew his brains out—but that's another story, a story showing that it is usually unwise to leave a boy twenty millions.

What great merchant is going to feed the masses of the people—establishing hundreds of restaurants in great cities where people can eat on the premises, combining with them distributing points for cooked food to be taken away, utilizing the restaurants and economizing rent, perhaps, by employing each one as a market for perishable foodstuff—milk, eggs, butter, meat—in the early morning hours before the restaurant or cooked food business begins?

There is a good chance for somebody to be useful and make money at the same time.

Meanwhile, thanks and credit to Mabel Kittredge, a young woman with a strong face, a determined mouth, a good jaw and a fine brain, who has done a good work and set a good example.

PAINTING THE LILY

By Winifred Black

WHAT in the world is the matter with the average American mamma?

I met a girl I know at the theatre the other day. I didn't know I knew her until she leaned over and spoke to me, and then I was so surprised I couldn't think of a thing to say.

A girl I know—and she used to be as sweet as a rose, as pretty as a pink and as modest as an English daisy, and now—well, when she came into the theatre, I sighed and said to my companion:

"Dear me, where do they all come from, these great strapping, bleached, rouged girls, with their bushel baskets of hair, and their figures on public exhibition?"

The girl I know has a mother, and the mother saw me looking at the girl I know.

"You didn't know her, did you?" said the mother. "She has changed a good deal, hasn't she?" "And her way of doing her hair—do you like it?" I said to the mother.

"Well," said the mother to me. "Er, ah—not exactly, but all the girls do it you know, and Marjorie cried her eyes out when I spoke of her doing it more simply."

And in the meantime poor Marjorie, who is well born and ought to be well bred, is striding through a horrified world looking like a caricature of a show girl instead of like a gentlewoman, just because Marjorie's mamma hasn't strength of character enough to make her daughter dress like a lady or like a daughter of a lady.

When Marjorie marries a cheap little imitation of a man, the only sort who can possibly admire her, as she is now, her mother will wonder why Marjorie's best friend, who wears smooth hair and simple frocks, made such an excellent match.

If I had a daughter under twenty who insisted on getting herself up to look like a French dancer, I'd make a bonfire of her clothes and dress her in Kate Greenaways before I'd let her appear in public in any such guise.

There's plenty of time to paint and to bleach and to make up, you poor little goose—plenty of time to do that when you have to.

You can't compete with the mature woman on her own ground, anyway.

She's bound to be cleverer and quicker witted and to have more tact than you. Why don't you look your own part, and put the elderly, made-up person out of existence by the contrast of your simple, girlish charm and your real complexion?

Leave the rouge pots and the bleach lotion to the poor, elderly "would-be's," dear girl. If your mother hasn't sense enough to make you dress as you should, why, dress that way yourself, and surprise her.

It's worth while; for a dozen reasons, a dozen times worth while.

Lesson XIII.—The Ground

THE Ground is what the A-er-o-nauts land upon when their fly-ing ma-chines leave their trol-leys. This ac-counts for the many Bumps and Hol-lows to be seen on the Face of the Ground.

The Ground is used for many purposes, such as

Ca-nals
Sky-scrap-ers
Re-al Es-tate
Worms
Po-ta-toes

Ca-nals are made by placing a Hole in a line along the Ground and then shoving the Hole down-wards. With the aid of Wa-ter and a Per-mit, Ships can then wend along the plac-id surface. If they are Barges they need the aid of a Mule, which is ob-tained with Loud Words and a Base-ball Bat.

Sky-scrapers are high buildings, slightly con-nected with the ground at the lower-end, the up-per being riv-et-ed to the Moon or a large Star.

Re-al Es-tate is the prin-ci-pal use of the Ground. It is Ground which the own-er wants some one else to have. One piece of such re-al es-tate is a Lot, if not too much.

The Ground is also largely used for Worms, which are ten-der-ly placed on hooks and are then Bait. A Girl with a Dead Bird on her Hat will squeal pret-ti-ly when she sees a Man bait-ing a hook with a Worm. Be-sides being used for Bait, the Worm is also trodden upon, mak-ing its life a con-stant round of pleas-ure. Little Boys and Girls should try to avoid being Worms by hitch-ing their Wag-on to a Star. [For method, see text-book on En-gi-neer-ing.]

The grand-est use of the Ground, how-ev-er, is as a res-i-dence for Po-ta-toes. For this reason alone we should never fall too hard upon the Ground.

Lesson XIV.—Africa

Af-ri-ca is in-hab-it-ed by the Sphinx, Mum-mies, Hip-po-pot-a-muses, and Af-ri-cans, with the ex-cep-tion of those in the Re-pub-li-can Par-ty.

The Sphinx is a Stat-ue fa-mous be-cause it will not an-swer ques-tions. No more will any other Stat-ue, but the Sphinx got there first, to the ex-clu-sion of J. P. Morgan and John D. Rockefeller. Close to the Sphinx are the Pyr-a-mids, which have only been used as a drop scene by Napoleon and by art-ists to show their pic-tures rep-re-sent Egypt.

Like Wall Street, Af-ri-ca is cel-e-brated for its Ru-ins.

Af-ri-ca is the home of big game, which is an-nu-al-ly filled with 50 tons of lead by Sports-men. The an-i-mal's head is then re-moved from its shoul-ders and hung upon a wall, where it looks more nat-ur-al and en-ables the Sportsman to out-do Ananias without reproach.

The Congo Free State is sit-u-at-ed in Af-ri-ca. This is a State where the White Men are free to civ-ilize the Na-tives, which they do with great vig-or, em-ploy-ing Rifles, Knives and Bull Whips with pleas-ing re-sults. When a Na-tive is civ-i-lized he works all day and earns more Mon-ey, which is re-tained by the White Man. Sta-tis-tics show that the Congo is in con-se-quence very pop-u-lar with the Black Men, the State having by far the high-est death rate.

Off the Cape of South Af-ri-ca is to be found the Fly-ing Dutch-man, but during the Boer war the British couldn't dis-cover any of him on land.

Preaching and Practice

Silence, with a Good Example, Far Better Than Rousseau's Eloquence Without Right Living

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

ONE of the writers who helped bring on the French Revolution by his appeals for human liberty was Rousseau.

He dedicated his life to attacks on the monarchy and the aristocracy.

He wrote beautifully of brotherhood; of how to educate children; of friendship and comradeship; and described a glorious world, where love would reign and happiness prevail if the old system of government could give place to his ideals.

But Rousseau lived not one of his ideals. History tells us that no living creature, man, woman or child, was able to live peaceably with him. He was jealous, suspicious, ill-tempered and unreasonable.

As soon as his own children were born he sent them to the foundling hospitals and never let their mother see them. He never saw them himself afterward. When he became famous other people tried to find these children, but they could not be identified.

Practice, Then Preach

THERE are similar people in every age; preachers, teachers, writers, missionaries, who can tell other people the way, like the lamp on the street corner, but who do not go that way themselves.

The lamp post can be excused better than the thinking individual. Before we give any fellow creature instructions on a certain line of conduct, we want to illustrate our own ability to pursue that line ourselves, to some degree.

All men and women, bachelors and spinsters and childless parents, have a right to express their ideals of bringing up children. We have all been children. Therefore we are capable of knowing wherein our parents failed, and wherein they succeeded in helping us.

But if we are parents ourselves, and, like Rousseau, fail ignominiously to do our duty by our offspring, we would show wisdom in keeping silent upon that subject without we speak to acknowledge our failures and to regret them.

Unless we can show some proofs of our worthiness of the name of friend we should not preach the duty of loyalty or give others rules of conduct to follow in friendship.

How Example Teaches

WHEN our own garden is filled with weeds we are unwise to write a homily on the necessity of keeping gardens well weeded for our neighbors to read.

Greater good is done in the world by the quiet people who keep their own gardens in order, live loyally toward their own friends, take good care of their own children and set a simple example of brotherhood and fellowship in their daily lives, however humble.

A physician, whether of the old schools or the new metaphysical school, should radiate health. Any failure to do so should be but temporary. Until we are wholly emancipated from the body such temporary failures may or must come; for it seems quite impossible for any human being to live absolutely to the law of right thinking, right acting, right diet and right labor all the time.

We are all prone to do too much or too little, to overact or underact at some time, and in consequence to break the law and suffer the penalty.

But the physician or the metaphysician should show an ability to quickly adjust himself to right conditions and to put himself again in harmony with the universe. If he is always ailing, anaemic or out of order he had better give up his vocation of a promoter of health.

Incipient Rousseaus

ONE preacher excused his immorality on the plea that his congregation was composed of immoral people. No man should take orders for the ministry unless he believes himself capable of helping his weaker fellows to rise above the temptations of the flesh and the weaknesses of the worldling.

That is his vocation, and by his moral strength and his human sympathy he is alone entitled to the robe he wears and the name he accepts of minister and moral counsellor.

Better no preachers than men who do not live what they preach; better a world of obscure, simple toilers after right living than a world of geniuses living in open violation of the beautiful precepts they give to humanity.

If every man performed his personal duty to those nearest him we would have no orphan asylums, no lying-in hospitals, no almshouses, no charity homes for the aged. They would all be in their own homes.

It requires more strength of character to live unselfishly for a year than to talk, write or preach unselfishness a lifetime.

Just now the world is full of promoters of new forms of altruist governments—of a new system to be ruled by the laws of "socialism," "brotherhood," "fellowship" under various names.

But how many of these promoters are living what they preach, even to the degree possible under the present monopolistic order? Have we not a great many incipient Rousseaus among us?
